e Cotton Than Ever.
Mussolini's Swim.
To Let Whisky Pay.
Mr. Klinger's Good News.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE BEST laid plans, as men and mice know, sometimes go wrong. Government said to cotton farmers:

"You grow too much cotton, the price is low, you can't make a profit. Plow under one-quarter of your cotton and government will pay you, in cash, enough to make up the difference."

The farmers said:

"Yes, indeed. Thanks."

Plowed up the cotton, and then what?

Then THIS: The money given by a generous government has been used to buy fertilizer for the 75 per cent cotton crop remaining. Farmers have cultivated the diminished crop more carefully than ever, and wise cotton men predict that the cotton crop this year will be bigger than last year, because production per acre will be more than 25 per cent greater.

Government is now persuading wheat farmers to cut their crop for next year, and promises to indemnify them in cash. Will they find a way to get more wheat out of less land?

CHANCELLOR DOLLFUSS, of Austria, small, determined gentleman who fights Hitler and his Nazi business, was sailing his yacht on the blue waters of the Adriatic. Mussolini, 50 years old, jumped into the water from the Italian shore, swam to the yacht and climbed aboard. Europe believes he and Dollfuss have come to an agreement that will interfere with some Hitler plans.

As interesting to Europe as the possible agreement is Mussolini's swim. You can imagine how enthusiastic Italians will be about it.

JOHN F. CURRY, leader of Tammany Hall, could, but will not, say to them:

"That is nothing. My predecessor, Richard Croker, used to dive overboard from Senator Murphy's place on the Jersey shore, and swim out of sight of land, paying no attention to the old Senator from Troy, sitting on the dock shouting: 'Richard, come back.'"

And Croker was over sixty, and had not had an easy life.

WETS PREDICT repeal of prohibition by November 8. That is not impossible. Twenty-two states of the necessary 36, have already voted to get rid of prohibition.

When prohibition goes, various taxes will be repealed, the nation relying on whisky drinkers to take care of expenses.

Some foreign nations rely on lotteries to pay government costs, and we shudder, because a lottery means gambling.

But a lottery doesn't eat out the insides of citizens' kidneys, or make them commit murder while drunk, or, as Thomas Jefferson said of whisky, "destroying the fortunes, the bodies, the minds and morals of our citizens."

IN NEW YORK, Mr. H. J. Klinger, vice president and general sales manager of Chevrolet, tells three hundred Chevrolet agents from 10 states to prepare for a boom in automobile sales.

William M. Packer, the energetic young gentleman in a small car who beat a fast Southern Pacific express train, "The Lark," from Los Angeles to San Francisco, to sell a car to this writer, says the boom is already booming on the Pacific Coast.

There is no better news than good automobile sales news, for that is the surest index of prosperity. Any intelligent man, who can, gets an automobile.

NEWSPAPERS have printed a statement, not confirmed, that a young Mr. Rockefeller returned from the West accompanied by a well-armed man, accustomed to shoot quickly.

If false, the report will do no harm. Nothing discourages kidnaping as effectively as the kidnaper's knowledge that the reward of an attempt at kidnaping may be a bullet in the stomach, instead of a ransom.

IN RUSSIA, 100,000 small children are "gleaning" in the grain fields. They go into corners of fields and glean any grain left by the machines. Many bushels will be gathered by the 100,000, ranging from kindergarten to sixteen years of age.

The little gleaners, unlike "Ruth, when sick for home, she stood in tears amid the alien corn," will work together in joyous bands, and probably enjoy it. Poor Ruth worked all alone. Fortunately she met Boaz.

SOMEWHERE in this is a moral or some important lesson:

In Chicago flies ate and spoiled the food of animals in the Lincoln Park Zoo. Director Young got revenge. Fly screening, highly charged with electricity, was put in front of the cages. An attractive scent lured the flies to the wire.

As they fell they were scooped up and fed to the fish. What valuable lesson would you, or your bright child, draw from that?

Helen Hayes Bolts Films to 'Save' Theater

HELEN HAYES

Declares Hollywood Should Pay Toll To Stage

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Helen Hayes has renounced Hollywood, at least temporarily, and in doing so has issued a challenge to all other theater-trained movie stars to do the same. She said:

"Hollywood should be made to pay its toll to the theater.

"There are I don't know how many actors, actresses and authors in Hollywood who owe their expensive contracts to the success they received in the theater. They have cashed in on that success in motion pictures.

"To keep the scale balanced those people should voluntarily pay a tax to the theater, by returning to it regularly, even at the cost of high Hollywood salaries."

Miss Hayes' decision to end her two-year desertion of Broadway cost her a bonus of four weeks' salary—a sum which runs into four attractive figures—which was offered her to return to Hollywood immediately to make "Wicked Woman."

'Stamp Lady,' Kin Of Washington, Dies

CONSHOHOCKEN, Pa., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ella C. Lubbe Ross, a descendant of an adnt of George Washington and known affectionately as the "Postage Stamp Lady" because of her resemblance to the portrait of Washington on stamps, died today. She was 72.

Mrs. Ross was a great-great-granddaughter of Sarah Ball, who was a sister of Washington's mother, Mary Ball. Her mother was Anna Louisa Custer, a member of the family of Gen. George A. Custer, Indian fighter. Her husband, an attorney, survives.

Lamson Calm at Trial; Not Father of Child Declares Maid

By ERNESTINE BALL
International News Service.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Aug. 22.—A honeymoon, strange as the murder trial itself, divides the interest of the countryside, on this, the second day of the trial of David A. Lamson, former Stanford University publishing executive, charged with the murder of his lovely young wife, Allene, in their campus home on the morning of May 30.

Dolores Roberts, important witness, former nursemaid in the Lamson home, will not be in court today. Neither will she be honeymooning, according to any of the standardized formulas for newlyweds.

But nothing has been in conventional sequence in this amazing new development in the Lamson murder mystery.

MOTHER-TO-BE

First the announcement that Dolores Roberts will become the mother of a child in November. An announcement supplemented by a statement from Defense Attorney Edwin M. Rea that goes right to the core of the implication involved:

"Dolores' baby has nothing to do with the Lamson case. Dave is not the father of the child."

Then the news that Dolores and 21-year-old Warren Sorenson had slipped out of San Joe yesterday and were married last night at Vallejo.

FOUR HELD UP BY TENDERFOOT

David Goldstein, 23, of 1839 Locust street is in the Oakland Police Station, waiting for a hearing in night court, where he is slated to face two couples who charge they were held up at the point of a gun last night in Schenley Park.

It was, Goldstein told police, his first job. The fruits of it were two empty wallets and jail.

Goldstein, police say, admitted the hold-up, declaring that he had been unemployed for over two years and was disgusted.

The youth, police say, picked out two couples parked along one of the driveways, showed them the barrel of a revolver and demanded their valuables.

The men, John Pallof, of 527 East Third avenue, and Charles Fenner, of 617 Tenth street, both of Homestead, complied.

They surrendered two empty wallets. Miss Jean Lucas, of 145 Dahlia street, and Miss Jean Norvak, of 117 Marigold street, Munhall, were not molested.

Thirty minutes later Goldstein was arrested at Bates street and the Boulevard of the Allies. Police said they found the gun and empty wallets on Goldstein.

Mellon Linked in New Testimony Of Couzens

International News Service.

DETROIT, Aug. 22.—A letter despatched by officials of the one-man Detroit Bank jury today asked former President Herbert Hoover to appear as a witness 'as soon as possible' before the jury investigating the closing of two national banks here.

The letter pointed out:

"It is the opinion of officials attendant upon the proceedings that you have in your possession certain facts which might render your testimony as a witness highly significant and essential to a true and thorough presentation of the reasons underlying the closing of Detroit's banks."

MELLON LINKED

The name of Andrew Mellon, Hoover secretary of the Treasury, was early brought into the Senator's testimony.

Attorney General Patrick O'Brien asked:

"What particular thing did you most object to in the conduct of the Treasury Department under the greatest Secretary of the Treasury since Alexander Hamilton?"

"It would take volumes to answer that."

Q—"You objected strenuously to tax rebates to prominent individuals, didn't you?"

A—"That is true, but there was no prejudice. My objection was to the interpretation of the law—that is one of my objections here. There were too many favorites."

Explaining his opposition to a $65,000,000 loan asked by the Detroit banks to avert the crisis, Couzens said:

"Mr. Miller (Charles A. Miller, former chairman of the R. F. C.) told me he believed it was an immoral and dishonest loan, and on the strength of his opinion I opposed it."

DENFENDS STAND

Witnesses have accused Couzens of precipitating through his opposition to this loan, the local crisis and inferentially, the national moratorium. Couzens stated:

"Even if the loan had been made there would have been a collapse of the Detroit banks within a few days. Not only was this situation true in Michigan at the time, but I obtained

WAVES BATTER JERSEY COAST

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Heavy seas from a receding tide continued to batter the New Jersey coast today as a three-day northeaster moved northward, leaving in its wake seven dead and considerable property damage.

A heavy rain which reached torrential force during the night together with a wind of gale proportions lessened with the dawn and apparently saved the inlet section from a bad flood when high tide was reached at 8:30 a. m.

The storm reached its height at midnight when three inches of rain fell in one hour, bringing the 24 hour fall to 8.15 inches, the third heaviest fall ever recorded for a similar period of time.

Automobiles were stalled as water ran hub deep in the streets. Cellars were flooded and in the western part of the city streets paved with wooden blocks were torn up. Residents in that part of town donned bathing suits and gathered in the blocks for fire wood.

Sections of the Boardwalk along the Inlet section were destroyed by the pounding waves.

FIVE WITNESSES FOR POLO STAR

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—Hearing on the criminal attack charges brought by Miss Eugenia Rose, Evanston nurse, against Cecil Smith, Texas polo star, today was tentatively set for 3 p. m. tomorrow, it was announced by Magistrate Willis R. Brightmire.

The preliminary hearing was postponed yesterday when Miss Rose failed to appear before the police magistrate. Smith and his counsel were present. The girl's absence, it was explained, was due to her decision to wait for the arrival of her parents from Cooperstown, N. D.

Friends of the polo start announced that they had located five witnesses to disprove the charges of Miss Rose that Smith had stopped his automobile in Hubbard Woods Friday night during which time she said she struggled for two hours to repulse his advances.

RETAIL CODE HEARINGS BEGIN

Great Trade Group Warned to Fight Profiteering

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A declaration that the National Recovery Administration would not countenance unreasonable price increases was made today by Hugh S. Johnson in addressing retail dealers at the opening of a hearing on their code of competition.

A request from Johnson to resent price increases by jobbers was put before the retailers at the first formal hearing on their wage-lifting, work-shortening code.

At the same time, the administrator said there would be no man-hunting connected with the Blue Eagle provisions, but that if the Recovery Administration found cheaters it would "take the Blue Eagle right off their windows."

The retail code, which embraces virtually all stores and shops in towns and cities of the country, except drug and food stores, affects more employers and employes than any of the major businesses.

44-HOUR WEEK

It calls for a 44-hour week with certain exceptions, minimum wages of from $10 to $14 a week, according to the population and location of the town or city, and bans child labor.

Under the code, Lew Hahn, president of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, said local retail trade committees would draft regulations to apply the code to stores in their districts. A. D. Whiteside, the presiding deputy administrator, suggested that questions of enforcement and control be submitted to the national committee for determination.

Urging the retail trade to resist price increases in the near future from jobbers who supply them with goods, Johnson declared:

"I say, resent these price increases and we will support you."

500 STEEL CAR MEN ON STRIKE

More than 500 sheet metal workers were on strike at the Pressed Steel Car Company plant in McKees Rocks today.

Picketing began at 4 o'clock, and the few men who planned to work were dissuaded.

The strike, its leaders say, is the climax of a week of conferences with the company officials. The issue, they say, is over the company union. The men also are demanding a return to their 1929 scale—which they say is 50 cents an hour for labor. The rate now is 40 cents.

Representatives of the company and the union planned to meet this afternoon to thrash out their differences. But officials failed to appear because they said, outside organizers were present.

The workers group is the Steel and Metal Workers Industrial Union, which, its national organizer, Pat Cush, insists is not a Communist organization.

C. W. Wrenschell, acting works manager, declared the company would not recognize the union.

The men are demanding the reinstatement of 144 men fired by the company, they say.

Appeal to Employers Not Aiding Recovery Begins Next Week

More than 12,000 employers in the Pittsburgh district who have not signed blanket or special codes under the National Recovery Act will be the subject of an intensive drive, beginning Monday, the Chamber of Commerce announced today.

Speaking before a meeting of representatives of 200 civic organizations, Frank C. Harper, heading the campaign, outlined the plans for three successive drives.

Reading a telegram from I. D. Wolf, newly elected president of the Allegheny council, Boy Scouts, Harper announced the scouts would begin Monday morning a check of all employers in the district. The scouts, Wolf said, pledged their support and would volunteer to furnish the lists.

'SELLING' THE NRA

By Thursday, Harper said, the lists will be ready to turn over to 500 volunteer workers—the sales force—which will visit the employers and check on whether they are carrying the Blue Eagle. For the approximate 12,000 estimated to be still outside the codes, the volunteers will attempt to convince them of the necessity of signing either blanket or special ones.

The sales force will also check on whether the employers are adhering to the provisions of the codes.

Following these steps, Harper announced, an intensive house-to-house canvass will be made, with women volunteers, to develop an "NRA sales drive." By this, the

COAL INDUSTRY CODE DELAYED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The Recovery Administration today abandoned hope of completing a code for the bituminous coal industry before tomorrow at the earliest.

Hugh S. Johnson, the administrator; Deputy Administrator Kenneth M. Simpson, and General Counsel Donald Richberg, planned to spend most of the day in conference with various groups of coal men.

A tentative draft for a code has been completed and is the basis for the negotiations. All concerned have refused to disclose its terms.

J. D. A. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company; Charles O'Neill, vice president of Peale, Peacock and Kerr; R. E. Taggert of the General Coal Company, and James D. Francis, president of Appalachian Coals, Inc., representing the non-union operators of the vast Appalachian district, talked with the General for two hours last night.

Wages and wage differentials were understood to remain the chief stumbling block in the way of an agreement, although the nonunion group still was opposed to any code which would assure blanket unionization of their mines.

Downtown Crowds See Mason Turn Fighter

James M. (Red) Mason, 60, who always drew attention as a fight manager, attracted the police today by turning fighter. Involved with him was Gust Camp, 41, former middleweight and now proprietor of an East Ohio street night club.

The former manager of Harry Greb, here from Chicago last night for the Dundee-Yarosz battle, passed Camp's car, parked in Liberty avenue. Camp remembered he later told police, he had forgotten to answer a letter Mason wrote to him several weeks ago.

Camp leaned from the car, police said, and answered Mason's letter verbally and then spat at him.

Mason picked up two weights from a newsstand and heaved them at Camp as police intervened.

Uniontown Girl Pickets Riot, Troopers Called

UNIONTOWN, Aug. 22.—State police were called to end a riot at the Berkowitz Shirt Company plant here when girl pickets stoned a truck carrying stock out of the factory.

James Silabaugh, driver of the truck, narrowly escaped injury from flying missles. Several of the pickets were nearly struck by the truck as it sped out Barton Mill road.

Three sheriff's deputies were unable to halt the disturbance and state police were called to clear the roadway.

According to reports circulated among the pickets, finished and unfinished goods are being shipped from the plant to other factories.

N. Y. CRIME JURY HEARS POLITICS, RACKETS LINKED

U. S. ATTORNEY TELLS PROBERS UNION EXISTS

County Prosecutor 'Invited' to Leave Hearing Room

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP.)—United States Attorney George Z. Medalie went before the New York County grand jury today to tell of an alleged union between racketeers and some political district leaders.

Medalie recently told a Senate sub-committee investigating racketeering that such a union existed and said he was ready to go before the grand jury to corroborate his assertion if called.

District Attorney Thomas C. T. Crain took no action, but yesterday the grand jury subpenaed Medalie and announced that its investigation would be carried on without the presence of Crain or his assistants.

Shortly after Medalie reached the Criminal Courts Building today, Crain, his chief assistant, Albert B. Unger, and Assistant District Attorney Harold W. Hastings went into the grand jury room. They stayed about 10 minutes.

TAMMANY OUSTER SOUGHT

Hastings said he, Crain and Unger had been invited into the grand jury room by the grand jury and that they then had been "invited out." After they returned to their offices, Medalie was summoned to the grand jury room.

On the eve of a campaign in which embattled fusionists, led by Fiorello H. La Guardia, will seek to drive Tammany from City Hall, the county grand jury took matters in its own hands.

It invited Medalie, prominent Republican, and Judge Frederic Kernochan, Democrat, who recently broke with Tammany, to appear to name politicians who, they charged, are in league with gangsters and racketmen.

A week ago Medalie told the United States Senate committee he could name at least four "professional politicians" in Manhattan who were associated with racketeers.

He said:

"I could name more, but the four are only those who stand out in front of our faces and can't be missed.

"Gangs are part of the machine for municipal control and not until politics is divorced from municipal affairs will we get rid of the gangsters."

CHARGES POLITICS

Kernochan, chief justice of the Court of Special Sessions, was on a yachting trip today, and was not expected to appear until later.

The charged that district leaders used gangsters on election day and protected them at other times.

Robert Daru, chairman of the committee for the repression of racketeering of the Federal Bar Association, said:

"The failure of Mr. Medalie to adduce proof has naturally given rise to the hue and cry that he has been attempting to make political news."

HOODLUM SLAIN BY 3 GUNMEN

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—James Spencer, 42, a minor hoodlum and beer peddler, was shot to death on a Northwest side street corner today following an argument with three gunmen whom he apparently had met by appointment.

Police believe he was lured to the death spot.

Twelve hours earlier a lone gunman shot and killed Leo Mule, 55, a veteran of the Aiello-Capone gang wars, as he rode in his own automobile.

Witnesses said Spencer apparently knew has assassins for they heard him shout after a heated exchange of words:

"Don't shoot, chief!"

Mule was killed by a companion as the two drove slowly in the bootlegger's automobile.

N. Y. Official Fights Ouster Charges

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Comptroller Charles W. Berry today asked the Board of Estimate to defer action on his application for retirement until charges filed against him with Gov. Herbert H. Lehman are thoroughly sifted.

The charges, filed with the governor yesterday by James E. Finegan and five others, asked Berry's removal for alleged "prodigal inefficiency, overtaxation and racketeering."

'TUB' WITNESS ON HONEYMOON

Dolores and her young husband dodging the press and the public, dividing the days between lawyers' offices, her mother's cottage in San Jose and the haven of the home of Dr. Margaret Lamson, older sister of David Lamson. Dolores had lived with Dr. Lamson since Memorial Day, when Stanford University learned that Allene Lamson had been found murdered in a tub of water in the bathroom of her seemingly idyllic campus home.

A young couple enmished in a murder trial, forced to announce their plight to a world that has little pause for pity.

CLEARS LAMSON

Head high, but cheeks scorching, she explained the announcement that she was an expectant mother on the eve of the trial:

"I want the world to know as time goes on and I must appear at the trial as a witness that David Lamson is not responsible—he has been crucified enough without involving him in my troubles."

Today the Sorenson family is ready to receive the young couple at their San Jose home if they care to live there. For here is a bride who any moment may have to snatch off her dainty bungalow apron and hurry to court where a subpena demands her presence whenever her testimony is required.

Outside of talesmen promptly excused by Judge Robert R. Syer because it is prune harvest time, the majority of men and women in the venire of 100 from which 12 must be chosen, are ready, even anxious, to sit in judgment in the case.

The setting of the crime—Stanford University—the character of the principals involved, brings into the courtroom an atmosphere alien to murder trials.

LAMSON TANNED

David Lamson, sun-tanned from exercise in the prison yard, sits at table with his counsel, as controlled as if he were a spectator gathering material for the best-seller that he hoped to write some day. How long can that composure last? It did not crack appreciably as the words "death penalty," "hanging," lashed through the drone of the usual questions to possible jurors.

Dr. Margaret Lamson and her sister, Mrs. Willis Thoits, are condemned through tragedy to show their loyalty to brother David by appearing every day at the trial.

Frank Thorpe, brother of the slain Allene, who came from Lamar, Mo., has chosen a seat in the rear where he will not compel the Lamson family to avoid his gaze.

Entered as second-class matter at the postoffice at Pittsburgh, Pa., under the Act of March 3, 1879.

For Thorpe has given out a written statement that while in the beginning he could not and would not, in anyway, even connect David Lamson with Allene's death, he now believes that David Lamson killed her.

Experts will be called by prosecution and defense: College professors and their wives; Dolores, the former nursemaid for the 3-year-old Lamson baby girl; another housemaid not so friendly to David Lamson; Sara Kelley, former Stanford co-ed whose friendship for Lamson is said to have kindled the jealousy that will weave an ugly thread in the whole fabric of the case built up by the prosecution.

Goodwill Envoys Leave Tomororw

En route to a luncheon meeting with the membership of the East Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, 30 Pittsburgh boosters will leave the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce by bus at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. This is the third party of goodwill ambassadors sent out by the local chamber this summer for the purpose of renewing friendships throughout the Pittsburgh trading area and also making new contacts for future business.

Walter Rosenbaum, chairman of the chamber's general publicity committee, and George R. Aufderheide, chairman of the organization's wholesale council, say they are enthusiastic over the results of the former tours.

IMPORTERS ASK BEER DUTY CUT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—(AP.)—Importers of foreign brews today appealed at a hearing before the tariff commission for a 50 per cent slash in the tariff on beer that would bring the duty from $1 a gallon down to half that figure.

Coupled with an assertion that the present tariff was "intolerable," the commission heard pleas based also upon taste and sentiment.

Harry S. Radcliffe, representing William L. Howitz Company, of New York, put in this way:

"To one who has tasted Pilsen beer in Bohemia, nothing else has the same appeal."

He also described the "sentimental experience" of drinking beer at Heidelberg. Domestic brands, he added, might well be preferred by those who had not cultivated the "foreign tang." He contented the two were not in competition.

URSCHEL KIDNAP GANG HEADED THIS WAY

U. S. Warns Sleuths To Be on Lookout For Fugitives

City police were warned today by the United States Department of Justice to be on the lookout for three men and a woman wanted in the kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, wealthy Oklahoma oil man. An alarm was also sent over the state teletype.

The hunted are Charles R. Kelly, George Botes, Edward W. Bentz and Catherine Kelly, according to the department. Police were told they were traveling by motor and to take every precaution in apprehending them as they are heavily armed.

Bentz was described as being 39, five feet, 11¼ inches tall; weighing 190 pounds, and having chestnut hair and blue eyes. He walks with a slight limp.

Catherine Kelly was described as 28, five feet, nine inches tall, weighing 141 pounds, and with black hair and brown eyes.

Machine Guns Guard Urschel Kidnap Jurors

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Leaders of the government's attack on the kidnaping racket were ready today to present their case to a grand jury which convenes here tomorrow in a setting bristling with armaments.

Witnesses and jurors in the preliminary prosecution of alleged members of the band that kidnaped Charles F. Urschel, oil millionaire, will be protected constantly by guards armed with sub-machine guns and automatics.

Announcing plans for immediate trial of those indicted, District Attorney Herbert K. Hyde, and Leslie E. Saltere, special assistant attorney general, were joined today by Joseph B. Keenan, special assistant attorney general, who is conducting an investigation of racketeering.

The federal government will make sure there is an "ironclad" case against Harvey Bailey, held in Dallas, Tex., for the Union Station slayings at Kansas City before it agrees to turn him over to Missouri authorities for prosecution, Keenan said today. He declared:

"He's one of the toughest eggs in the country. The only way to break the smile on that fellow as to break his neck."

Death by hanging would be possible in the Kansas City murder case, while a life term would be the maximum if Bailey is brought here and convicted under the federal kidnaping law in connection with the abduction of Urschel.

1 DEAD, 2 HURT IN KNIFE TILT

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., Aug. 22.—One man is dead, and two are in the local hospital, the result of a stabbing affray at Walker, last night.

Frank Williams, 55, of Cumberland, Md., died of knife wounds in the throat and Frank Donley, 50, of Altoona was stabbed near the heart. Donley was sent to the hospital after he and Emmett S. Osgood walked two miles to report the cutting. More than 12 hours later an unidentified Serbian, 40, was found unconscious after a fall over a 20-foot cliff. Donley identified the man as his assailant. Police are holding Osgood and Michael Crowley pending an investigation.

considerable inside information indicating somewhat the same conditions prevailed in sections of Maryland, West Virginia, Indiana, Nevada, Louisiana and Ohio. Records show I made a speech on the Senate floors denouncing such loans."

In answer to a question from O'Brien, Couzens said that such loans usually resulted in "smart money" withdrawals, leaving the "little fellow holding the bag." He said:

"The banks usually closed anyway."

TEXT OF LETTER

The Senator then launched into a dramatic defense af the government's attitude in refusing to "spend the people's money to bail out a lot of large depositors in the Detroit banks."

"I agree with the attitude of the federal officials, with the attitude they stuck to all through the dark days of last winter. That is, at all costs the federal government must be maintained.

"Detroit may go down, Chicago may go down, New York may go down, but the national government must stand solvent. Because when the national government ceases to stand solvent all of the cities and states and everybody in them will crash to financial ruin."

The Honorable Herbert Hoover, Palo Alto, Cal.

Dear sir:

Officials of a public judicial inquiry into banking practices in Detroit, having under examination as one of its phases, the closing of all banks in Michigan on February 14, 1933, desire earnestly your presence as a witness.

The invitation to appear and testify concerning the attitude of administrative agencies of the federal government toward the two closed Detroit national banks prior to March 4, 1933, is respectfully extended by myself at the request, and on behalf of Judge Harry B. Keidan, presiding at the hearing.

May I suggest to you, as indicative of the nature of this examination, that while primarily its purpose is the discovery of crime, necessarily, in the public interest, it must be concerned with a full and complete presentation of all facts bearing on closing of these banks whether they concern private or government enterprises.

It is further the opinion of officials attendant upon the proceedings, that you have in your possession certain facts which might render your testimony as a witness highly significant and essential to a thorough and true presentation of the reason underlying closing of Detroit's banks.

Will you communicate your decision to the court as soon as possible? Yours respectfully,

HARRY S TOY.

However, Sexson said he would discuss the subject with Hoover and would announce later whether a public statement would be made.

U. S., COLOMBIA BEGIN TRADE DISCUSSION

Closer Alliance With Nations Sought by Roosevelt

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Marking inauguration of the greatest movement in the history of the United States to strengthen the bonds of economic unity with the nations of Central and South America, the State Department today opened trade negotiations with Colombia.

The discussions, aimed at improving commerce between this country and Colombia, were opened by Acting Secretary of State Phillips and Dr. Don Fabio Lozano, Colombian minister.

Following the formal opening of the negotiations, the discussions will be carried on by Assistant Secretary of State Jefferson Caffery, who is in charge of Latin American affairs.

HOPES FOR ALLIANCE

Colombia is one of the three Pan-American countries with whom President Roosevelt decided to launch his movement for the development of closer economic relations with the nations of the Western Hemisphere. This movement was prompted largely by the failure of the world economic conference to reach any tangible international agreement for improving world trade. President Roosevelt hopes it will lead to the development of a Pan-American trade alliance at the gathering of those nations in Montevideo next December.

The other countries invited to discuss the conclusion of new trade agreements were Brazil and Argentina. As soon as the conversations with these three nations are concluded, other South and Central American countries will be approached.

CENTERS ON FREE LIST

The trade discussions with Colombia will center around the willingness of this country to maintain coffee, bananas and cocoa, the principal exports of that republic, on the free list for a definite period in return for expansion of American markets in Colombia. The length of time this government agrees to maintain those articles on the free list depends upon the concessions granted American trade.

Meanwhile, the possibility of this government renouncing the general policy of most favored nation treaties, particularly as that policy applies to Europe, still was being discussed in State Department circles.

Sentiment in favor of renouncing this policy has developed rapidly among an influential group of veteran diplomats and experts within the department.

HERRON PRESIDES

With Mayor John S. Herron presiding, Harper explained that the members of the committee, totaling 500, should assist in getting volunteers to carry on the drive.

That the personal calls to be made on every employer will be one of the most convincing of steps in the enforcement of the recovery act was the belief of Harper. He said the house-to-house canvass could be more effectively accomplished by women volunteers, and asked that able women offer their services.

The Boy Scouts will restrict their survey to the downtown, while the East Liberty Chamber of Commerce will supervise a survey in the East End, and combine with it the drive to get those outside to sign the code. This was announced by Patrick Flood, secretary of the East Liberty group. Businessmen will make the contacts, he added.

2 Girls, Escort Caught After Gasoline 'Holdup'

Two girls and their male escort were arrested in the Boulevard of the Allies early today a few minutes after they drove away from the Standard Oil Company service station at Craft avenue with gasoline they didn't pay for, according to police.

Regis Killmeyer, night attendant, said the trio told him to charge it to the "Conkling Republican Club" after he had serviced it with eight gallons of gasoline. Killmeyer said:

"I told them all sales were cash and the man in the party said, 'Well, drain it out.' I started to do so and had about half out when he demanded that I leave some in the tank with the threat of being punched. Then he drove off."

The trio, using a car with South Carolina license plates, said they were Jack Flynn, 31, of Brookline boulevard, and Bessie Smith, 26, and Eleanor Hansell, 26, of South Evaline street. They were held over in Morals Court.

Stickup Suspect Says He's Only a Moonshiner

Declaring he was not a stickup man but operated a moonshine still in Hazelwood, Frank Mozer, 25, of 2818 Warrington avenue, was held for further investigation today in Central Police Court after city detectives said they uncovered a still at 4231 Shields street.

Moser when arrested talked freely about the distillery, but denied any connection with the robberies. His statement sent Police Capt. John Barry and City Detectives John O'Connor and Sigmund Gorskey to the Hazelwood address where they report confiscating a 300-gallon still, 16 gallons of mash and several gallons of moonshine.

Two others, arrested as suspects in connection with the robberies, Joseph Salbutta, 23, of 106 South Fourteenth street, and Michael Sherry, 18, of 707 Sarah street, were also held for investigation.

Women Lost Money To Fortune Tellers, Detectives Say

Two city detectives went detecting yesterday and this is what they said they heard Doney Stanley, 26-year-old Gypsy girl, tell her father, Lee Stanley, while walking in Fifth avenue:

"No, I am not going to do that. You will get me in the same fix I got into in Chicago."

As a result, father and daughter who live at 1314 Forbes street, were arrested as suspicious persons and arraigned today before Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Central Police Court.

They were held for investigation when Lieut. Edward Harkins testified he believed the pair knew something about the fleecing of several Pittsburgh housewives with a disappearing money trick. Detective Walter Monaghan said he thought so, too.

Gypsies have been telling fortunes to unsuspecting women lately, according to Harkins, after which they volunteer to do the money trick for them. A bill is borrowed, tied in a handkerchief and returned with instructions to pray over it for three nights. The trick, it seems, is revealed when the handkerchief is untied and a piece of paper is found in place of the money, detectives said.

FOUR GIRLS DIE IN CAMP FIRE

BRADFORD, Pa., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Trapped in a blazing summer cottage in Allegany State Park, four young girls are dead, victims of an attempt to light a stove with gasoline.

Katherine Frank, 17; Margaret Sexton, 18; Gertrude Sexton, 12, and Eileen Deinhardt, 10, all of Buffalo, N. Y., were lying on cots when, according to Coroner P. H. Bourne and O. R. Lindberg, chief ranger at the park, the mother of the Sexton girls poured gasoline into the stove, causing an explosion.

The stove was near a door, the only exit.

Bourne said Mrs. Sexton, burned on the hands and face, ran out crying for help as flames enveloped the small structure.

A park policeman and two men chopped through a rear wall and found the girls dead. Three of them had just returned from a trip to the Chicago World Fair.

Miss Frank, a cousin of the Sextons, and the Deinhart girl, had been staying in neighboring cabins and were visiting the Sextons.

Tiny Black Kitten Brings Joy to Child Exile

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Nig is firmly established as a Machado. The tiny black kitten's purrs are bringing happiness again to Maria Elvira Obregon, 5-year-old granddaughter of Cuba's deposed President, for he is taking the place of Pedro, abandoned in the flight from the island republic.

Nig was one of 200 kittens offered to the child after newspapers told how the youngster was crying for her lost pet. He was sent to the hotel suite of the Machado family by Rosita Torre, a dentist's daughter.

40,000 CUBANS HAIL RETURN OF EXILES

Mendieta and Penate, Leaders of Early Revolt Cheered

HAVANA, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Forty thousand persons gave a thundering welcome to Col. Carlos Mendieta and Col. Roberto Mendez Penate today when they returned to Cuba from the exile to which they were sent for leading the quickly suppressed revolt against the Machado government of August 1931.

The return of the two revolutionary heroes shared importance with the resumption of normal activity in Havana's harbor, where business had been paralyzed by a strike which started before the ousting of President Machado.

At 7 a. m., all port workers returned to their jobs. There were a few small disorders at the Ward and United Fruit docks, but they were quickly suppressed by the harbor police and there were no arrests and no casualties.

HAIL DE CESPEDES

Col. Mendieta and Col. Penate came back from New York aboard the Morro Castle. From the dock they went straight to the presidential palace, where they embraced Machado's successor, Provisional President Carlos Manuel de Cespedes.

With the President they appeared on a palace balcony and great shouts went up from the thousands of onlookers. The presidential secretary, Raul de Cardenas, addressed the crowd.

From the palace the returning exiles went to their homes, followed by a caravan of flag-draped automobiles which passed through lanes of cheering Cubans. Many persons had made pilgrimages from the interior to be present.

The newspaper Union Nacionalista, Col. Mendieta's organ, reappeared this morning and the edition was quickly exhausted.

STRIKE AT END

Concerning the strike of harbor workers—which had remained to bedevil the new administration after the general strike leading up to the ousting of Machado had been terminated—Port Captain Arturo De Carricarte said:

"Everything is quiet and I do not anticipate further trouble."

Members of the ABC secret society, soldiers and police continued rounding up former Machado followers, while the War Department held to a policy that all in hiding should surrender to authorities lest they be victims of mob violence.

Such a fate befell Julio Heredia, former associate of Maj. Arsenio Ortiz, who was killed in Santiago, and Luis De Spayne, a policeman who was shot in Palmo Soriano. Maj. Ortiz, who was accused of several political killings, now is in Germany.

Guillermo Urrutia, former commissioner of the Havana Central District, committed suicide last night in Lawton suburb after ABC members and university students, who accused him of participating in terroristic acts during the previous regime, surrounded the house in which he had hidden.

Titian Barbara Stanwyck of the films dropped into Pittsburgh by plane, had her hair down, and began to loo kup train schedules for New York. Why the hurry?

She said:

"I'm going to New York to play around and vacation for five whole days with Mr. Fay. It'll be swell."

Mr. Fay is Frany Fay, cometlike star of musical comedy, and Barbara's husband.

Not the least put out by her enforced halt, which was due to poor flying conditions eastward, Miss Stanwyck found Pittsburgh "perfectly swell."

How was the flight from Hollywood?

She answered:

"I love flying. Perfectly swell."

She reserved a place to New York on a train, prepared to depart in the same trim, tailored suit she wore on landing, here.

TAXES FOUGHT BY PRINCESS

The Princess of Thurn and Taxis, of Uniontown, today had on file in United States Court a petition to restrain David L. Lawrence, Collector of Internal Revenue, from collecting an additional $2,261.80 on 1930 taxes. A hearing will be held Thursday. The princess is a niece of J. V. Thompson, one-time coal baron.

The petition was filed by W. W. Parshall, A. A. Thompson and R. J. Arnett, trustees of a trust fund created by Gerald Purcell Fitzgerald in 1906 for the benefit of Lyda Eleanor Niccolls Fitzgerald and her children. According to the bill of complaint, the Commissioner of Revenue assessed the additional tax against the trustees last July without giving 60 days' notice, as required by law.

Weather Conditions.

The weather is cloudy and rainy over the Middle Atlantic Coast states, due to the tropical storm now off the coast. Heavy rainfall occurred yesterday and last night from Atlantic City northward to New York. At Atlantic City, 6.92 inches and at New York, 3.18 inches. The western disturbance remained nearly stationary over the plains states and produced light to moderately heavy rainfall from Oklahoma to Canada. High pressure, centered over Ontario, covers most of the eastern half of the country, and a high centered over Montana covers the Far West. Temperature changes since yesterday morning were unimportant, although it is somewhat cooler than yesterday over the Middle Atlantic states and over the Rocky Mountain states. Maximum temperatures of 90 degrees or higher were limited to the Southern states yesterday.

Speeding Chariot Injures Three Making Film

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—In the first chariot casualties of the year, three men were injured and $25,000 worth of camera equipment was wrecked yesterday.

The victims were in the path of two speeding chariots, each drawn by four spirited horses. The drivers tried vainly to swerve to opposite sides of the injured trio.

Malcolm McPherson was taken to a hospital, suffering from cuts and bruises. William Thompson and Ralph Colgrove were up and about after treatmeat. They are cameramen.

SLAIN DOCTOR'S HOSTESS FREE

GREENWOOD, Miss., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, child specialist, charged with murder in the death of Dr. John Preston Kennedy, surgeon with whom she formerly was associated in clinical circles here, was free under $5,000 bond today.

On request of attorneys who have stubbornly fought for her release pending trial, an agreement was reached late yesterday under which preliminary hearing was waived and bond set.

The case will be given to the grand jury when it meets November 13. District Attorney Arthur Jordan plans to present evidence built around a dying statement of Dr. Kennedy, which charged that the woman physician gave him poison in a glass of whisky while he was her guest.

STRIKE SLAYER GETS PAROLE

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 22.—John B. Yoder, former coal and iron policeman for the Pittsburgh Coal Company, was paroled today on a manslaughter charge in connection with the killing of Mike Philipovich in the Arnold City mine riots of 1931.

Physicians testified Yoder required immediate hospital treatment for injuries of the spine received when playing football at Penn State College a number of years ago. Yoder had served six months of a two-year sentence in Uniontown jail.

Judge Davis W. Henderson, in granting the parole, said:

"I would be inhuman if I did not permit this man to receive treatment. I am convinced that Yoder is neither faking nor feigning, and that he is in a deplorable condition. Without adequate facilities at the jail to treat him, the only thing to do is to grant a parole."

Yoder will enter Uniontown Hospital at once.

Under questioning by defense attorneys Mrs. Williams said her husband was wont to drink at church functions as well as in their own home. On one occasion the Rev. Mr. Williams came home after a funeral, she testified, "invited a friend to come over, and got intoxicated."

His drinking extended over a period of 10 years, she charged.

FAMILY MOURNS SLAIN ORCHARD RAIDER

Tear-Stained Children Miss Jobless Father Killed Seeking Pears

To W. R. Bryant, 40, a part-time farmer of Jacks Run road, John Drab was an unknown pear raider who must be frightened, but to a little family in Stieren street, he was "father"—a kindly father who, like countless others in the neighborhood, had been unemployed for three hard years.

John Drab, 43, with his friend, Joseph Cotych, of 187 Preble avenue, walked along the railroad tracks to Jacks Run, a short distance down the Ohio River, to get some fruit for his children. During the three years of unemployment, the father had not been able to buy them even necessities and according to their aunt, Helen Glanda:

While getting the fruit in Bryant's orchard yesterday he was killed by a shot fired with the intention of frightening him. Bryant is a brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad and was spending the day off on his farm.

Mrs. Drab sobs while exclaiming:

"Oh, it's terrible. He was a good man. He never quarreled with anyone. It's a shame he didn't give him no warning or nothin'. He would have gone away."

The children, red-eyed Josephine, 16; 7-year-old Bernard and 9-year-old Anthony, sit in the tidy kitchen with the grandmother, refusing to be comforted.

There is wonder in their faces, wonder that anyone could kill their father. And while their grief takes comfort in prayer before a cross or holy statue, a neighbor mutters:

"Poor people, they always have more trouble."

FOUR BOYS LOST SHOPPING

The "buy now" idea struck four young clubmen from Mt. Oliver yesterday, and they set out adventuring on the busy highways and alluring sidewalks of downtown. Fearing the big city and its slickers, they left their money at home.

They would have gotten along, too, except for the fact that they were wandering from window to window—and they were, after all, only tots, ranging from 6 to 9 years.

Radio Patrolman Thomas Abbott saw them peering into the windows. He saw them once too often during the day, and finally did something about it. He took them along. They told him they had saved $4.22 to buy a bed for their clubhouse, and were just window shopping. He turned them over to their parents.

Detective Thrillers Soothing, Tests Show

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The psychological reason why great men and others like detective stories is out—the tales are soothing.

They cut the pulse rate, lower blood pressure and steady motor nerves. Furthermore women react to them like the men.

These experiments are published by Ray Mars Simpson, psychologist at the Institute for Juvenile Research, Chicago. His test readers were 40 university students, 24 men and 16 women. Their ages were 18 to 41.

While wearing attachments to record their physical status, they read detective stories, history, psychology and geography, in 15-minute periods, for six successive days. The first, third and fifth days were devoted to detective stories.

The instruments showed that the rate of breathing was consistently faster while reading detective stories, and deeper during exciting than less-exciting sleuthing tales. But this speeded up breathing was on a declining rate, the longer they read the slower it dropped.

Dr. Simpson states:

"Reading detective stories tends to reduce the pulse rate more than reading academic material. The blood pressure falls to practically the same final level at the end of 15-minute periods devoted to either detective stories or geography. Motor steadiness is improved more by reading detective stories than by reading history.

"In short, the great majority of detective stories are soothing rather than exciting. Believe it or not, detective stories are interesting rather than exciting. They act as a sedative for tired businessmen."

Kiss 'You'd Give a Baby' Causes Society Furore

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—That kiss Eric Scudder gave to Mrs. Emily King during a country club party Saturday night had numerous reverberations today.

Into court went Albert Cleveland King, charged with attempting to shoot his wife after he had found her in the embrace of Scudder, president of the company of which he is vice president.

The kiss came in for various definitions, in and out of court. Regardless of its classifications its effects were many.

Social circles buzzed.

Mrs. King, 29, was in bed under a physician's care, suffering from nervous shock.

Scudder did not appear in court, so the case was continued until Friday to allow the three directly concerned—kisser, kissee and husband—to get together before the judge.

In a statement, Scudder defined the embrace as "just the kind you'd give a baby" and that he considered the whole affair "silly."

As the story was related in Mrs. King's formal charges, her husband appeared when Scudder kissed her while they were dancing on the edge of the clubhouse swimming pool.

King knocked her down, she declared, applied several uncomplimentary terms to his business associate and left the party. When she arrived at her apartment, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Scudder, her husband shot at her, she said. King is accused of assault to kill with a deadly weapon.

King told the court yesterday that he hadn't meant to harm her. He said:

"I slipped on the floor and the gun accidentally discharged."

DEBT MEDDLING STIRS DAVIS OUSTER CRY

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Renewed demands for the removal of Norman H. Davis, "ambassador-at-large," burst forth in congressional circles following disclosures that Davis has indicated to foreign governments the United States will accept drastic debt reductions.

Meanwhile, investigation at the State Department disclosed Davis is not an ambassador, and has absolutely no authority to deal with debts.

His post is chairman of the American delegation to the disarmament conference. While the President gave him the "personal rank of ambassador" for purposes of prestige, the State Department admitted this "means nothing at all."

Congressional demands for Davis' immediate removal came from Senator Schall (Rep.), of Minnesota, who characterized the program of Davis and Secretary of State Hull for a 10-cents-on-the-dollar settlement of war debts as "most outrageous and unacceptable to the American people and Congress. Schall said:

"Davis does not represent American sentiments. The American people believe the debts have been fairly settled and expect the debtors to pay in full.

"Davis was on the J. P. Morgan & Co. preferred list, and I have no doubt Morgan is behind the scheme to cancel the debts and settle the burden on the American taxpayer."

Roosevelt Talks Arms Plans With Davis

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt turned attention today to the world disarmament problem in conference with Norman H. Davis, his special envoy to Geneva.

Mr. Davis motored here just before noon with Mrs. Davis and went into immediate session with the President. He is counting on a return to the Geneva arms parley early next month and Mr. Roosevelt has some very definite ideas in mind to seek a success of this long-dragged out parley.

William H. Woodin, the Secretary of the Treasury, who has been ill, telephoned today requesting a postponement of his dinner engagement with the President for tonight, until Thursday night.

Stephen T. Early, secretary to Mr. Roosevelt, said the Treasury head asked the postponement because of business he was transacting at his home in New York.

With a steady rain beating on the windows, the President spent a leisurely morning, posing for his portrait and clearing away a batch of correspondence.

SLAYING OF TWO WOMEN LINKED

RAVENNA, O., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Police trace similarities in the widely-separated slayings of pretty Mary Klinko, 23, at Kent on July 23 and of an Elmira (N. Y.) woman earlier in the same month while they hold a 60-year-old vagrant as a suspect in both cases.

Officials also await the outcome of a sanity hearing for the man, before Probate Judge Henry F. Robinson.

Three residents of Elmira picked the suspect out of a police lineup at Kent as one they saw near the spot in Elmira where Pearl Robinson, 34, was stabbed to death and attacked July 5. Prosecuting Attorney Sheldon F. Roe, of Kent, announced. Miss Klinko had been slashed and attacked, police said.

RULING ON IRISH GUARDS NEAR

DUBLIN, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Political circles believed the Free State Executive Council would declare illegal today Gen. Eoin O'Duffy's Blue Shirt National Guard, which paraded in uniform Sunday in defiance of a government order.

President Eamon De Valera announced Sunday that a proclamation banning the blue shirts would follow the parades. In this event the guardsmen, unless they resigned, would be liable to arraignment before a military tribunal empowered to sentence those found guilty to death.

Furniture Club To Hold Outing

The third annual outing of the Furniture Club of Pittsburgh will be held tomorrow at Daniels Farm, Babcock boulevard. A feature will be a mushball game between the furniture dealers and the wholesale salesmen. Sidney Hart is president of the organization. Arrangements are in charge of Irving H. Wolfson.

WIFE APPLIES FOR ALIMONY

Asserting she and her 10-year-old daughter have no means of support, Mrs. Alice Edna Mitchell, 137 Whitaker street, Whitaker, has petitioned Common Pleas Court for alimony and counsel fees pending her divorce trial against Alan K. Mitchell, 520 Eighth avenue, Munhall.

She says her husband, in the curtain stretching business in Homestead, has not contributed to her support for three years. They were married 11 years ago. She had asked for a divorce on grounds of cruelty.

SLAIN DOCTOR FOUND IN WRECK

International News Service.

DETROIT, Aug. 22.—With a four-inch knife wound in his throat, Dr. Henry B. Hoben, prominent osteopath, was found mysteriously slain in his wrecked automobile on a North Side street here today.

Police said he apparently was trying to drive for help when death came. The car climbed the curb and crashed into the front of a store.

Code to 'Debunk' Bridge Proposed

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—E. M. Lagron, president of the Western Bridge Association, today had proposed a "code of debunk" bridge experts and to clarify the numerous claims to national bridge playing titles.

Lagron suggested that all organizations make plans for one annual tournament to determine the champion. Under the present system, he said, so many persons claim to be champion that even top-rate players don't know whom to recognize.

SLEEP ILLNESS TOLL RISES IN 'WORST' SIEGE

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The epidemic of "sleeping sickness" in this vicinity was described here today by Dr. J. P. Leake, of the United States Public Health Service, as being by far the most serious outbreak the country has ever known.

Two deaths during the last 24 hours have brought the number of victims of the strange malady of encephalitis to 15, while 149 persons were reported ill with the disease.

Dr. Leake, who was dispatched here from Washington when the outbreak first became serious, said there was no reason to fear the epidemic would assume proportions of a plague, however, and that there should be no undue alarm.

Dr. Ralph Muckenfuss, of Washington University, in an effort to produce an immunizing serum, has been conducting research with monkeys, inoculating them with various materials from patients. A shipment of 24 of the animals will arrive here from the East within a few days, Dr. Leake said.

RELIEF 'CZAR' BANS BOYCOTT

International News Service.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 22.—Boycotting of merchants in handling of relief funds is illegal, Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, made clear here today.

Any attempt to discriminate in the designation of stores where unemployment relief scrip may be redeemed can not be enforced, he said.

Hopkins enunciated the policy in answer to a threat made yesterday by Harper Gatton, Kentucky relief director, that merchants in this state who do not support Gov. Ruby Laffoon's sales tax program will be boycotted.

CHECK BREAD PRICE RISE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—An apparent checking of increases in bread prices, "at least temporarily," was noted yesterday by Dr. Frederic C. Howe, consumers' counsel of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

At the same time he warned that "consumers will have to watch out, however, for a possible lowering of the quality of the bread as an alternative to price increases." He said:

"Already there seems to be a tendency on the part of some stores to discontinue higher priced brands and substitute lower priced ones. This substitution suggests the introduction of poorer quality—a form of profiteering as injurious to consumers as unreasonable price increases."

An exception to the general rule of no bread price increases between August 2 and August 9, the last week studied, Dr. Howe said, was El Paso where an average advance of eight-tenths of a cent a pound loaf was noted.

GREETING CARD CODE 'IDEAL'

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Ideals about a great social custom and a decrease in postal revenues have led the manufacturers of greeting cards to present the NRA with a code containing the most elaborate price-fixing and trade-regulating features yet received.

In a genuinely literary preamble to the code, the manufacturers point out that the approximately $20,000,000 postal revenue received from the custom of exchanging greeting cards is liable to be decreased if the cut-throat competition and wildcat production of the printed missives is not checked.

The manufacturers declared the greeting cards not only were cheapened in price, but in sentiment. To offset the latter, a provision of the code would establish a board of censors to prevent the "production or sale of vulgar, indecent or sacreligious" cards.

LUMBER 'CZAR' APPOINTED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—C. Arthur Bruce, hardwood lumber manufacturer of Memphis, Tennessee, was selected today to head the Lumber Code Authority, Inc., created under the code of fair competition approved Saturday, as executive officer.

The authority is composed of 30 representatives of the lumber industry and will administer the code, issuing and enforcing all rules, regulations and interpretations of the NRA trade plan. Three additional members of the authority will be named by President Roosevelt to act as his representatives.

Bruce has resigned as president of the Bruce Hardwood Manufacturing Company and severed all connections with other lumber interests to serve as executive officer which corresponds to the post of president of a corporation.

CONTINUE AUTO CODE STUDY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—At the office of Deputy Administrator R. W. Lea, conferences continued today on the code for the automobile industry in which the question of maintaining open shop policies by code declaration was at issue.

Donald Richberg, general counsel for the administration, has taken the position that no reservations to the industrial control law's grant of a free right to organize labor unions was possible, but a somewhat different attitude has been taken by Administrator Hugh S. Johnson. Indications today were that the question remained unsettled.

As yet the NRA has received no formal communicaton from Henry Ford, who is not a member of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. It is understood Johnson expects to hear from Ford on his code plans very shortly after a code is approved.

Penna. Cigar Makers Ask Relief in Code

RED LION, Pa., Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Unless temporary relief is granted to manufacturers of hand-made cigars pending action on cigar codes, plants in five Southern Pennsylvana counties will be forced to close, throwing 10,000 men out of work, C. M. Ehehalt, executive secretary of the York County Manufacturers' Association, asserted today. Ehehalt regards the existing temporary code as "plain injustice" to the hand-made cigar factories, which cannot compete with the machine-cigar producers.

JEWELRY PRICE DUE TO JUMP, DEALERS SAY

An increase as high as 40 per cent is expected shortly in the prices of all jewelry, in the opinion of prominent jewelry store heads here.

The price rise, they say, is due to a limited stock in their cases, the fall in the dollar in foreign exchange and the NRA code raising wages and shortening hours.

Their present stock, they said, is rapidly being depleted and is being sold at the price they paid for it. It will cost them an increased sum to replace it.

Following are opinions of several jewelry store executives:

PRICES GOING UP

J. A. Hardy, president of Hardy and Hayes Company:

"Silver is selling subnormal and it couldn't have any other move in price except to go higher. It has been selling from one-third to one-half less than formerly. The NRA has already affected salaries and working hours and is going to affect prices. We have been selling our stock at the old price, but as soon as it is gone we will have to sell at the advanced prices.

"August, usually the dullest month in the year has shown an increase in business. There have been more people in the store, they have been talking prosperity, acting more cheerful and spending money more freely. We have been doing four times as much business as last year.

"The jewelry business, which was hit harder than any other, has faced about and everything is pointing to a good Christmas trade."

'BUY NOW TO SAVE'

J. A. Reed, president of the J. R. Reed & Co.:

"Prices are going up daily. We are selling all of our old stock at the cost price, but all jewelry that we buy from now on will cost us a great deal more. The public should buy now to save."

F. A. Keating, president of Grogan Company:

"I don't think there is any doubt that in the near future there will be a marked increase in all goods. In the first place, all stones have to be sold at a higher price due to the fall in the dollar. Silver unquestionably is going to advance and is already increasing in price.

"America has never enjoyed prosperity when prices were inordinately low and with prices advancing as at present, there is no doubt in my mind that this business will come into its own."

DIAMONDS ADVANCE

Harry Sipe, partner in the Sam F. Sipe store:

"Prices will be higher with the advance in the price of diamonds and precious metals. There has already been quite a large advance in diamonds due to the difference in foreign exchange. A leading watch company has announced that on September 15 every watch will cost from $2.50 to $5.00 more."

John M. Roberts III, vice president of J. M. Roberts & Co.:

"I have noticed a great increase in business already and especially with the younger generation, who are starting to buy engagement rings, which they have been waiting to get for a long time. The NRA is going to greatly affect prices in a very short time. The public will have to pay as much as 40 per cent more."

EASTERN MILK STRIKE CALLED

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Signature of the Philadelphia milk shed marketing agreement by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace was met last night by dairy farmers with a strike call, effective within 30 days unless the government ousts its milk administration and revises the approved scale of prices.

The agreement requires licensing of all distributors, effective at 12:01 a. m. Friday. It affects 24 counties in Pennsylvania, eight in New Jersey, all three in Delaware, 11 in Maryland and two in West Virginia.

Although sponsored by the Interstate Milk Producers' Association, largest organization of its kind in the region, and approved by the federal milk administrator, Dr. Clyde L. King, himself a resident of the area, the agreement has been bitterly opposed by farmers' organizations in the Harrisburg and Philadelphia zones and in New Jersey.

Those issuing the strike call demand payment for their milk greater than the increase allowed them under the federal agreement, but insist that the retail price of milk shall be reduced. Under the agreement it goes up one cent a quart. The objecting producers declare the distributors' share is large enough to permit a profit even though cut at both ends.

Anthracite Industry Holds Code Meeting

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Anthracite operators met in closed session here today, and, although no statement of the proceedings was issued officially, it was reliably learned that the subject of discussion was a code of fair competition for the industry. Anthracite Institute officials said nothing would be announced at least until the meeting was over, if there was any announcement even then.

'Scofflaw' Prize Giver Pays $10 For NRA Slogan

QUINCY, Mass., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Decevare King, Quincy banker, who in 1924 paid a cash prize for the invention of the term "scofflaw" to express contempt for those who disregarded the prohibition law, today paid another for a rallying cry for the NRA.

The winning slogan was:

"NRA saves us."

It was offered by Mrs. T. L. Williams, of Quincy, and chosen from among hundreds offered by contestants from all parts of the country. The prize was $10.

BAN EUROPEAN STEEL DUMPING

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Close on the signing of the temporary steel code the Treasury today issued an anti-dumping order against European steel products, mostly from the Saar region seized by France from Germany at the close of the war.

The order covered steel products also from France, Germany and Belgium, besides a variety of other goods. These included Japanese lamps and calcium carbide; thumb tacks and woven wire fencing from Germany; Portland cement and binder twine, Great Britain; Canadian rock salt; stearic acid, Holland, and sulphite paper, Sweden.

Idle Anthracite Mine to Resume

HAZLETON, Pa., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Repairmen started work today to eliminate one cause for the anthracite miners' demonstrations last week—the idleness of the Greenwood colliery at Seek.

The Lehigh Navigation Coal Company announced that sufficient orders are on hand to warrant working of this mine in addition to others. Several thousand unemployed miners, demanding equalization of work, have suspended demonstrations pending consideration of their grievance by the National Recovery Administration.

NRA HONOR LIST HERE GETS 429 NEW NAMES

Certificates of compliance with all NRA terms were filed with Postmaster James B. Anderson by 429 employers, bringing the total today to 15,161 Anderson announced.

NRA stamps which went on sale yesterday in the Pittsburgh postoffice and its 24 subdivisions were reported in heavy demand. Postmaster Anderson said 400,000 of the stamps, which went on sale for the first time in Washington last week, were received here.

Among the signers of the NRA agreement yesterday was Viviano, Inc., manufacturers of spaghetti and macaroni. Sam Viviano, manager, said wages had been increased from minimum of 12½ cents an hour to 35 cents, while some of the macaroni workers had been increased 45 to 55 cents an hour. A 20 per cent advance in the price of the company's products was forecast.

H. D. Schilling of the Fort Pitt Typewriter Company here, returning to Pittsburgh from Chicago, said the National Typewriter and Office Machine Dealers Association had signed the blanket code. It affects 800 members throughout the United States.

The Allegheny County Beverage Distributions Association were to meet at 2 p. m. today in the Elks' Temple, Seventh street, to prepare a code for presentation to the National Recovery Administrator.

The Philadelphia Company and its subsidiaries have signed codes approved by the National Recovery Administration. The companies employ 7,364 workers.

Wage Differential Snags Needle Truce

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Final agreement for settlement of the dress strike was delayed today with thousands of workers facing several more idle days.

Out-of-town contractors, dissatisfied with the 10 per cent wage differential granted them in agreements signed Sunday, were unable to agree today on substitute regulations after a long conference with union representatives.

Farley Gets Name Carved at Cost Of $1,000

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Postmaster General Farley's name is to be carved on the imposing new national Postoffice Department building now rising here, but it is costing about $1,000 to do it.

Walter Brown was Postmaster General under the Hoover administration when directions were given to carve the names of all the Postmasters General since Benjamin Franklin on two stone panels.

In order to add Farley's name it has been necessary to plane down one entire panel. Workmen on scaffolding here will now carve the names again, with Farley's added.

Wages Increased By 2 Coke Concerns

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Wage increases of 33 1-3 per cent, effective immediately, were announced yesterday by the Yough-Connellsville Coal and Coke Company at its Lemont plant, and the Crawford Coal and Coke Company at its plant, near Leckrone.

Sixty employes in each plant are affected.

LEGION LEADER SUPPORTS NRA

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A plea for the support of governmental efforts to restore normal and reasonable living conditions for those willing to work, and a demand for economy in places where it is worse needed, than, at the expense of the veteran, was voiced here today by Louis A. Johnson, national commander of the American Legion, at the convention of the Michigan Department of the legion.

The national commander opposed cancellation of foreign debts, and urged the enactment into law of the principle of drafting resources as well as man power in time of war.

Charging that half the wealth of the country is invested in tax-exempt securities, Johnson said:

"If we are going to have economy, then let the government call in these tax-exempt securities so that the dollars of the rich man shall be taxed pro rata with the dollars of the poor man in carrying this government of ours."

WHISKY DEARTH SEEN AFTER REPEAL

After repeal—what? Will there be an adequate supply of liquor? What will it cost? These questions are answered in a series of four articles, of which this is the first.

By ARTHUR HACHTEN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—A dearth of genuine whisky of the bottled-in-bond variety is the immediate prospect for parched throats that yearn for a tall highball or a nip of rye or Bourbon straight after prohibition.

Statistically, measuring visible supply with anticipated demand, the two are far apart and there is nothing the government can do to boost the supply until 36 states have ratified the Eighteenth Amendment repealer, Dr. James M. Doran, commissioner of industrial alcohol, observed.

SUPPLY SMALL

Dr. Doran pointed out there are 4,000,000 gallons of old whisky, aged 16 years and more, in bonded warehouses.

There are 7,000,000 gallons of whisky from one to four years old. Distilling of this for medicinal purposes began in 1929 and continued through 1932.

Recently authority was given to manufacture another 7,000,000 gallons and this probably will be all made by the end of October.

ONLY 18,000,000 GALLONS

That would make 18,000,000 less withdrawals for medicinal purposes, on hand when snow flies, against a normal consumption before prohibition of 150,000,000 gallons annually. And the eighteenth amendment is expected to be repealed by Christmas

Experts differed on the probable consumption of whisky after prohibtion, though all agreed it would be greater than the supply. High prices at the outset after repeal are anticipated. Representative John J. O'Connor, (Dem.), of New York, leader of the House anti-prohibition forces, predicted consumption would fall to half what it was before prohibition and he looks for sky-high prices—at least $3 a pint, against the pre-prohibition rate of 50 to 75 cents.

Imported liquor will help replenish the supply, but it will take time for this flood to inundate the country. A lot of rectified whisky will be sold. Rectified whisky consists of from 10 to 30 per cent aged whisky, with alcohol, coloring and flavoring added.

BASE FOR LIQUOR

Dr. Doran estimated about half of the whisky drunk before prohibition was of the rectified variety, so this will not be new to imbibers. The old whisky on hand will furnish an excellent base for rectified liquor, he said.

Nearly half of the 18,000,000 gallons on hand next winter will not have been properly aged. However, Dr. Doran believes that whisky from 1 to 1½ years old can be made salable if it is treated properly.

Representative Emanuel Cellar (Dem.), of New York, is planning to present a bill to Congress to permit whisky two years old to be withdrawn from bond, instead of four years as now required.

serted that so far as speculative price rises were concered his administration considered it "our duty to see that there is no runaway market."

'DON'T KILL THE GOOSE'

He said the National Industrial Recovery Act would increase prices to meet new costs imposed by compliance with the trade charters, but just because of this:

"There is no reason to go way beyond reason. If you do this you just kill the goose that lays the golden egg. The house that we are trying to build will collapse like a house of cards."

The retail trade hearing was described by Johnson as one of the most significant of any so far held. The retail trade, embracing virtually all stores and shops except drugs and food, affects more employes than any of the major businesses.

Johnson described the purposes of the Recovery Act and told the retail dealers it provided an opportunity for the country's great industrial units to band together to wipe out "intolerable conditions" of depression. He added that the act did not need "czarism" to administer it.

He said those who did not cooperate not only were hitting their fellows but were helping to perpetuate the depression.

NO VIOLENCE

In enforcing compliance with the Blue Eagle provisions, Johnson asserted there would be no violence, no man hunting and no boycotting.

But, he said, the administration would move to uncover cheaters behind the Blue Eagle and then:

"We are going to move in and take the Blue Eagle right off their windows.

"You can't execute a great national law like this on ballyhoo and hoey. The purpose now is to try to get as wide a measure of co-operation as possible. After that has been done—and it is almost over now—then we are going to see to those who are doing the cheating.

"The purpose of this act was to enable all trades and industries to rid themselves of those chiseling practices which have been running through your industries. You can decree that ruthless competition and price cutting is to go.

"That, you may be sure, doesn't mean that the government is in business."

FIRST TRADE HEARING

In opening the hearing, Deputy Administrator A. D. Whiteside said:

"This is the first public hearing on trade, as distinguished from industry, which has ever been held in the United States.

"The decision which will be made as a result of this hearing will affect not only the 429,121 storekeepers whose investment is less than $500 and whose stores are the centers of the community life in thousands of villages, but those great department stores which are cities within themselves in metropolitan centers.

"All told, 1,499,720 retail concerns and more than 5,000,000 wage earners will be directly or indirectly affected as the result of this inquiry.

"We open this hearing with the full consciousness of the fact that the code or codes for the retail trade which will ultimately be approved will have a profound effect upon the economic and social life of every man, woman and child in the United States."

The code was presented and approved by:

The National Retail Furniture Association, the National Retail Hardware Association, the National Retail Dry Goods Association, the Mail Order Association, the National Association of Clothiers and Furnishers and the Shoe Retailers Association.

RE-EMPLOYMENT DATA

David Friday, economist for the National Retail Dry Goods Association, estimated that the proposed 44-hour week for selling and non-selling employes and the 48-hour week for maintenance employes would reemploy all of those lost since 1929 by those firms which are still in business. He said a 40-hour week would be necessary to absorb those employes who lost jobs as a result of the failure of their employers.

Whiteside, deputy administrator, suggested that every industry was responsible for those normally attached to it, regardless of how they lost their jobs.

Speaking of the weight of burden on the various classes of stores, Friday said small town employers would have the most difficult job under the uniform hour provision.

Lew Hahn, president of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, read the provisions of the retail code and told Whiteside that approximately 3,000 dry goods stores were represented in his organization. He said this number included virtually every outstanding store in the country.

LOCAL ENFORCEMENT

The code provides for local retil trade committees to draft regulations to apply it to all stores within their districts.

Whiteside asked Hahn for an interpretation of this local authority and was told that the retailers thought local business would have a more effective control over local conditions than a national board or the government itself. Hahn said:

'It seemed to us that nothing could be better than to turn back to local business the task of enforcing the code."

Whiteside suggested that this administrative feature be changed so as to require specifically that local committees submit questions of enforcement and control to the national committee, also provided by the code, for determination.

Hahn replied there could be no "quarrel" with that suggestion.

Whiteside also asked Hahn about changes made in a revised version of the code which reduced from $35 to $30 the pay of executives who would be exempt under the proposed trade plan and also increased the maximum hours from 40 to 44 hours a week. Hahn said those changes were made because of the demand from smaller merchants who insisted they could not meet the other conditions.

OFFICIAL URGES BUYING CODE

STATE COLLEGE, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Kenneth Collins, New York, assistant to the president of Gimbel Brothers, declares the success of the new deal is in danger until mass buying appears.

Speaking at the evening session of the third annual conference of Pennsylvania retailers last night, Collins said:

"Return of prosperity is not based alone on capacity to buy, but also upon the willingness to buy.

"The code for the consumer has been forgotten, and this forgotten code is a problem in practical psychology. Americans must substitute fun for worry to assure success of this mighty effort.

"It is up to advertisers everywhere to support the new deal, to strive to substitute fun for worry, to seek to establish this 'forgotten code for consumers.'

"Every maker of goods has an immediate and vital interest in the sale of his goods. If he is intelligent he knows that it is necessary for him to make intensive study of the public mind, of the public fears engendered through three years of depression, and to use the channels of paid advertising to offset these fears, to make the people want to spend the money that the administration is seeing that they get."

PITTSBURGHERS AFFECTED BY RETAIL CODE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Thousands of Pittsburgh employes of retail drygoods, shoe, hardware, furniture, women's wear and clothing stores are interested in the fair competition code for mercantile establishments which came up for public hearing before the NRA Administration today.

Consumers in the Pittsburgh district also are directly concerned because of the effect of this code upon prices of necessities which they must buy. The hearing will be conducted by Deputy Administrator Arthur D. Whiteside.

Except for outside salesmen, deliverymen and maintenance employes, who may work 48 hours a week if paid time and one-third for all hours over 48, the work hours of all employes are limited to 40 a week excepting at the Christmas holiday rush, inventory and other peak periods when they may work a maximum of 48 hours for not exceeding three weeks in each six months.

STORE SERVICE HOURS

It is agreed that hours which any store must remain open for service operation shall not be fewer than 52 in any one week unless such store was operating on fewer than 52 hours before July 1, this year. And in the latter case there shall be no reduction at all.

The minimum wage rate for Pittsburgh and all other cities of over 500,000 population is fixed at $14 per week, as compared with $13.50 per week for cities of 100,000 to 500,000, and $13 for those cities between 2,500 and 100,000.

Employers signing this code agree, moreover, not to reduce the compensation of employes who now receive more than the minimum rate, notwithstanding the work hours may be reduced, and also "not to use any subterfuge to frustrate the spirit and intent of this code which is, among other things, to increase employment by a universal covenant, to remove obstructions to commerce, and to shorten hours and raise wages for the shorter week to a living basis."

FAIR PRICE PLEDGE

Significant, likewise, is the pledge not to increase the price of any merchandise sold after the date of signing the code over the price of July 1, this year, "by more than is made necessary by the actual increase in production, operating, replacement or invoice costs of merchandise or by taxes and other costs resulting from action taken pursuant to the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

The pledge also is made that in making price increases full weight shall be given "to refrain from taking profiteering advantage of the consuming public."

In order to administer and enforce the code, the various groups sponsoring the code agree to set up a Retail Trade Committee which is to act as both a planning and a fair practice agency. It will consist of two representatives of each national organization subscribing to the code. Either at its own instance or on complaint, this committee will investigate and report to the administrator upon alleged violations.

REALTORS BACK NRA DRIVE

WASHINGTON, Aug 22.—(AP.)—Real estate boards throughout the country today had pledged "their wholehearted support" to Hugh S. Johnson, director of the National Recovery Campaign.

A telegram from W. C. Miller, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, said:

"The officers and directors of the National Association of Real Estate Boards wish to assure you of the wholehearted support of the 500 real estate boards throughout the United States and to advise you that we are using our best efforts to work out a comprehensive code for the real estate business which will advance your splendid program for national recovery."

Highlights of Retail Code Being Heard at Capital

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The retail code, upon which hearings were opened today by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson, proposed in part:

A 44-hour work week, except for a 48-hour week at peak periods, and excepting those earning more than $30 a week, registered pharmacists and other professional persons.

That a store must keep open for 52 hours of operation unless it was operating less than that prior to July 1, 1933.

Maximum hours in towns under 10,000 (except where the towns are not part of a larger trade area) set at 48-hours for employes.

Wages: Cities over 500,000 (by 1930 census), $14 a week; 100,000 to 500,000, $13; 10,000 to 100,000, $12. (One dollar less per week in South.) Wages to be increased 20 per cent in towns between 2,500 and 10,000, except that wages are not required to be over $11 but must be over $10.

Employes between 16 and 18, $2 less than scale for first 12 months, $1 less for second 12 months; apprentices over 18, $1 less for first 12 months—except that minimum wage to juniors or apprentices shall not be less than $10.

Present wages not be reduced even though hours may be.

Prices not to be increased more than is made necessary by actual increases in cost.

No individual shall sell goods at retail at less than the net invoice delivered cost or current market delivered cost, whichever is the lower, plus 10 per cent to insure that labor costs shall be at least partially covered, this not to prevent bona fide seasonal sales or clearances of perishable or demaged goods.

The code forbids advertising which claims a continuing policy of generally underselling competitors. It also forbids the purchase of prison made goods from the date of the code or their sale after December 31, 1933.

The code forbids child labor.

BOARD TO PROBE NRA VIOLATIONS

HARRISBURG, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—With one member yet to be appointed, the State Recovery Board swings into action tomorrow to check alleged violations of industrial codes set up under the National Industrial Recovery Act. The board will meet at the Capitol at noon.

Its members, appointed by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, are: Matthew H. McCloskey, Jr., and J. David Stern, Philadelphia; M. E. Comerford, Scranton; Charles McK. Lynch, Greensburg; Louis C. Emons, Swarthmore; S. Forry Loucks, York; Warren Worth Bailey, Jr., Johnstown, and John A. Phillips, Harrisburg.

COAL PROGRESS REPORTED

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A report of progress on the solution of a single working code for the disordered coal industry cheered President Roosevelt today in his effort to complete the recovery drive by Labor Day.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the industrial administrator, telephoned the President shortly after midnight that real progress has been made on the troublesome coal code.

There is every expectation here that Johnson will bring the new charter for the coal industry and its thousands of miners to the White House in the next few days.

DARK THEATERS, STRIKE THREAT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—With the threat of darkened movie theaters all over the nation in the background, the National Labor Board attempted yesterday to settle Hollywood's motion picture strike before it spreads.

The board met with representatives of the National Alliance of Theater, Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators, now out on strike, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and others.

Today it will call in representatives of the producers and the International Brotherhood of Carpenters.

The striking union includes in its membership nearly all the moving picture machine operators in the country, and might, reports to NRA officials indicated, call its operators out if its demands are not satisfied.

500 NRA Orators Sought to Boost Blue Eagle

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(Universal.)—An "SOS" call for 500 additional speakers to carry forth the message of the NRA drive was sounded last night at a meeting of the NRA Speakers' Bureau held in the Hotel Pennsylvania.

It is the intention of the bureau to carry the gospel of the Blue Eagle to every street corner—to churches, shops, theaters, institutions and wherever people gather in public.

J. T. Muller, chief of the orators, warned them against threats, coercion or use of the word "slacker." Rather, he said, there must be an appeal to the conscience of the people to explain how and why compliance with the NRA benefits all.

7,500 Dressmakers Striking in Chicago

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Sewing machines in 187 Chicago dress goods factories were idle today as a strike of more than 7,500 employes, members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, went into its second day.

The strike was called yesterday after union officials said employers had failed to adopt a suitable code under the terms of the national recovery program. Today representatives of both were preparing to offer arguments at the hearing on the industrial code in Washington Wednesday.

TELL IT TO ELSIE -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By ELSIE ROBINSON

Crippled People Can Find Love and Happiness

Can a cripple hope for happiness?

That is a cruel question. Suppose you were asking it? Or a beloved sister, or brother?

Today you're young—strong. If, tomorrow, you were struck down, left maimed, limping . . . then what?

Would you still have a chance to live, and love, normally?

If not—why not? Would the fault lie with a callous and cruel world . . . or perhaps with you?

Why am I asking these questions?

Here's why . . .

Dear Elsie:

I am a young lady in my early 20s. Due to an accident, which occurred about five years ago, I have a slight limp and have to wear a special kind of shoe.

I am attractive, full of life, and boys seem to take to me at once. They seem full of interest. But then when they see me walk, their faces fall a mile. This happens nine times out of ten.

Maybe you think I am just sensitive, but I'm not. I go in for any sport I'm able to. I mix with everyone. I never talk about my accident. I don't feel sorry for myself. But as much as I try to talk myself out of it, I would have to be blind not to notice this reaction of the boys.

I study their reactions and find them to be either a surprised look, a sorry look or a disappointed one. But what really gets my goat is that some of them actually look peeved, as if I had tried to put something over on them.

DESERVE CONSIDERATION

I often wonder how they would feel, in my place . . . or if a brother or sister had met with a misfortune like mine. Whether they would feel that they were different human beings on account of it . . . or that they were put off in a different world.

I wish you'd print this letter. Maybe some of these boys would wake up to the fact that we humans have made no contract as to just how long we will be able to walk—talk—see—work—or live . . . and that even people who limp deserve a break.

Maybe this letter sounds as if I must be "very sensitive," but any of my friends know different. I can take a joke and give one, but I still can't understand why these boys act the way they do when they see my limp. Can I ever hope to have a happy life like other people? LILY.

DON'T HUNT 'REACTIONS'

Can you ever hope to be happy?

Of course you can, Lily. And in spite of what you say, you could be happier now, if you would forget yourself a little more. You say you're "not sensitive" . . . but actually, you are. You hate and notice, your own affliction so keenly that you expect other people to hate and notice it too. So you watch them and magnify every trivial glance, which, under other circumstances, you'd never notice.

If you weren't "sensitive" you wouldn't do that. And if you didn't do it, the chances are that you'd be treated just as any other girl. But when you are hunting "reactions," your suffering imagination can always find them.

So let's try a new tack. Talk about your accident, freely and easily. You've tried to hush it up—and only succeeded in making yourself think about it. Admit it. Joke about it. And then forget it!

For no twisted foot can keep you away from life and love, unless you let it twist your mind, honey. And that's just what you have been doing, without realizing it. Be friendly and have faith. Stop watching folks to see how they're going to take you. Expect them to take you as you take them. Let life in, and it will fill your days with joy.

Fay King Finds That Young People Are Students and Thinkers

THE YOUTH OF TODAY ARE SERIOUS STUDENTS
THEY DISCUSS WORLD AFFAIRS
THEY HAVE IDEAS AND OPINIONS WHICH THEY EXPRESS CREDITABLY

By FAY KING.

I am pleased with the young persons it has been my privilege to meet and talk with. They are alert and earnest. They are students and thinkers.

They take a profound interest in world affairs. They have ideas and opinions of their own which they express fluently, seldom resorting to slang or wisecracks.

They are thinking things out for themselves, and their mental poise and self-assurance is going to be an important factor in future affairs, for they are not going to be easily swayed either by agitators or orators.

The gin and jazz youth are becoming a back number. They are already the older younger set.

Sound judgment and self-reliance seem to me the chief assets of the new youth.

Given in Marriage -:- A Sequel to Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Lillian Brings Victory to Cause of Young Lovers

At Lillian's challenge, so nonsensical in its phrasing but with what we both recognized as deadly earnestness in its meaning, Philip Veritzen thrust forward his head and stared at her—a steady gaze that measured the strength of her purpose.

"Mes complimentes, madame!" he said with a low bow. "I am at your service with foils, pistols or those hammerlocks of which you speak so blithely. But have a care, fair lady! I am a desperate man!"

She returned his stare with equal steadiness.

"I wonder if you are, Phil," she said, "or if you simply think you are. But that doesn't matter to me, or to you. There's only one thing that matters to those who love you, of whom I'm fool enough to be one—" she paused significantly.

"That is wonderful and interesting news—if true," he told her, smiling. "I am the most blessed of them. But tell me what it is that matters to you."

"The one thing that matters is this. Are you, the great Philip Veritzen, going to be a welsher for the first time in your life?"

"You are taking an unfair advantage," he said slowly.

"I know I am," Lillian retorted cheerfully, and apparently not at all affected by his patient fury. "If I were a man you'd knock me down, and if I were a lady you didn't love, and who didn't love you—why, you'd walk out on me. But, 'being as you're you and I'm me,' you can't do anything but grin and bear it—and listen. So let's see the grin."

PROMISE REPUDIATED

"Will you kindly tell me what you mean by calling me a welsher?" he asked stiffly.

"Only as late as last Christmas you made three solemn promises about your son and his betrothed wife. One was that Noel should have his mother's patrimony. That you have kept scrupulously, even putting it out of your power to rescind it, by legally making it over to him. The second was that Mary should have her career as you had orginally planned, and so far you have kept that word. The third was that you would leave the time of their marriage entirely to Madge. I'm not going to insult your intelligence by reminding you that the spirit of that promise has been bent so far that it has almost snapped, especially by this attempt you have just made to bargain with those two poor young things."

"I cannot accept your premise, Lillian," he said stiffly. "I simply asked them to postpone their marriage for the same time that they asked me to postpone the trip I had planned for Mary."

"And what is that but a bargain, Phil?" Lillian cried. "Also it's a distinct repudiation of the promise you made Madge last Christmas. You told her that she alone should be the judge of the time of their marriage. It isn't like you to quibble, old dear. You always have been backward in your endeavor to do even more than the square thing on any agreement you made. I just can't believe the evidence of my own eyes and ears on what you are doing now."

ADMITS DEFEAT

She had him, and "on the hip." I knew it by the queer expression that suddenly leaped into his eyes. It was a desperate man, seeking any possible loophole of escape, that turned to me.

"Do you agree with Lillian that I am breaking my promise to you in making this stipulation?" he asked.

For the fraction of a second only, I hesitated, while there swept over me a mean little fear that for thus thwarting him he would make me pay in some fashion connected with my play or my future work with him. Then, scoring my own weakness, I spoke determinedly.

"Yes; I agree with everything she has said," I told him.

He rose abruptly and bowed low, first to Lillian and then to me, a sardonic smile upon his lips.

"It is a wise man who knows—when he is beaten," he paraphrased. "I shall consider my plan of sending Mary to Paris as laid upon the table—indefinitely. They may marry when they please. Only, I want to hear nothing from either of them on the subject. When you have arranged the wedding day, let me know and I will be there—if wanted. But that is all I wish to know about it. May I bid you good day?"

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

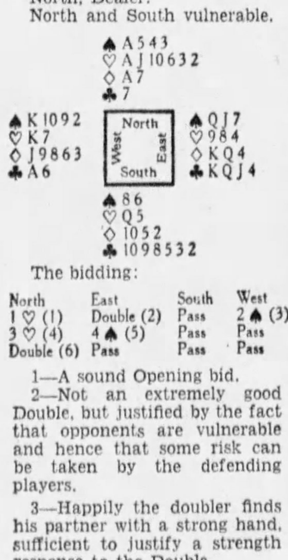
The Lack of Entries

"Partner, if I could only have put you in the lead we could have defeated the contract," is the frequent lament of Bridge players, particularly in cases where one of the partners has doubled the contract on seemingly sufficient values, only to find too late that the time factor was working in favor of the Declarer. When one member of a partnership defending a contract holds apparently all the taking tricks for his side, he should be very chary about making a Penalty Double, unless he can count safely sufficient tricks to assure the defeat of the adverse contract. As a matter of fact, most authorities lay down the rule that no adverse contract should be doubled unless the expectation of defeat is at least two tricks, and all Bridge students will do well to remember this.

An example of a hand which could have been defeated if North, for a moment, could have transferred the burden of the lead to his partner is the one below:

North, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡ (1)	Double (2)	Pass	2 ♠ (3)
3 ♡ (4)	4 ♠ (5)	Pass	Pass
Double (6)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A sound Opening bid.

2—Not an extremely good Double, but justified by the fact that opponents are vulnerable and hence that some risk can be taken by the defending players.

3—Happily the doubler finds his partner with a strong hand, sufficient to justify a strength response to the Double.

4—Perhaps a questionable Rebid, but it did not affect the eventual result.

5—Although East has shown the full strength of his hand by his Takeout Double, he can scarcely refuse to bid for game in view of West's Jump Response.

6—A bad Penalty Double. North must find a trick in his partner's hand to defeat the contract.

Inasmuch as North held first-round control of the trump suit, he elected to open the singleton club. West won this trick with the Ace, and it was, of course, apparent to him that the club was probably a singleton as, from the bidding, North should have the missing Aces—in any event, at least the heart and spade Aces. West knew, moreover, that if South held the diamond Ace he could not by any possibility make his contract. To lead trumps would not prove of any benefit. The diamond Ace must be smoked out, and if North held it and not more than four trumps, then West could limit his losers to the three Aces. If South held the diamond Ace, then 4 tricks must be lost.

West now led the small diamond which North refused to win, and which was won by the Queen in Dummy. It was thus apparent that North must hold the diamond Ace. The situation now appeared much better, but there was, of course, the chance that North might have four diamonds to the Ace-Ten, so this suit must be led once more toward the Dummy. The Declarer led the small trump from Dummy and played the Ten from his own hand. If North should win, the situation, of course, would be easy. Should he refuse, a second round of diamonds would throw him into the lead and force him to a choice of the undesirable lead of a trump or the laying down of the heart Ace. Whatever line of defense North might elect to follow, the contract would be safe.

The play of the hand was by no means simple, but unquestionably North, by his Double, did tend somewhat to clarify a difficult situation.

TODAY'S QUESTION

The bidding:

South	North
1 ♠	3 ♡
3 NT	4 ♠

You, South, hold:

♠ A K 8 4 ♡ 9 5 ◇ A 7 6 3 ♣ J 4 3

What do you bid?

Answer: Pass. You have opened the bidding on close to a minimum hand with no particular fit in the suit with which North has chosen to force. The mere fact that you have two Aces and the King of a bid suit does not justify a four no-trump bid when the rest of your hand does not warrant any further action.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Wedding Ceremony

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

May I trouble you with my tale of woe, as I would a friend?

I am to be married at a nuptial mass at 9 o'clock in the morning. My father has refused to give me away, as he did my sister a year ago, and insists that this is all "show" and quite unnecessary.

My older brother would gladly do this for me, but feels as I do, that it is out of order in our father's presence.

Would it be correct for me to walk alone, or what would be the best arrangement? There are to be four ushers, two attendants and a maid of honor.

C.

Thank you for the kind and friendly way you worded your request . . . indeed you may come "as a friend!"

I wish that I could tell you just what to do about this perplexing problem. But it is, dear girl, entirely a matter of your own reaction. I'd like to have your older brother walk with you and give you in marriage, since he would like to, and evidently has a manly and cooperative point of view about this. But since you feel that this might too much emphasize your father's not doing it, I suppose that you oughtn't to plan on this.

The next best thing, and perhaps the best thing under the circumstances, is for you to walk down the aisle alone. This is sometimes done, and perhaps would n't be so noticeable as to your father's not presenting you in marriage. With that number of attendants, you wouldn't, I am sure, mind doing this.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Ptomaine Poisoning Is Still a Health Menace

A recent newspaper article tells of 75 workmen who were treated for severe ptomaine poisoning. They had eaten box lunches served to them while at work. Perhaps the food had been prepared under hygienic conditions, but it is probable proper precautions were not taken to prevent its spoilage.

Dr. Copeland

Food poisoning, or "ptomaine poisoning," as it is more commonly called, is traceable to food that is allowed to spoil. Food that is improperly prepared or carelessly preserved easily spoils and speedily deteriorates. When this occurs, toxins or poisons are formed by the action of germs or parasites. These organisms multiply rapidly and may be so numerous as seriously to poison the system.

In former times ptomaine poisoning was an exceedingly common disorder. In fact, most digestive disturbances were believed to be due to this ailment. As a result of the improvements in refrigeration, preservation of foods and better means of transportation, cases of ptomaine poisoning are far less common. But in spite of these splendid methods of shipping and other modern facilities intended to keep foods fresh, there is always the danger of spoilage because of individual carelessness.

Certain foods are more liable to spoil than others. For example, frozen foods and cold storage foods, improperly cared for meat, shell fish, and other fish carelessly handled, spoil quickly after removal from refrigeration. Foods that contain gelatine, as well as cream soups and sauces, cream filled desserts, unless properly looked after, quickly spoil and are capable of producing symptoms of ptomaine poisoning.

The sufferer from ptomaine complains of nausea and headache. In a more severe case, vomiting, abdominal pain, and complete prostration are alarming symptoms met in this condition. In an extreme case the progress of the disease is so rapid that death may occur within twenty-four hours.

Not by any means do nausea and headache invariably indicate food poisoning. These may be the result of some other digestive disturbance, or they may be symptoms of inflammation in the gall bladder, stomach or intestine. Persistent nausea, headache and vomiting must never be neglected. They may be the forerunners of some serious disturbance and should always be called to the personal attention of your physician.

Every case of this sort should be reported to the local health authorities, so that they may trace the source of the trouble. This action on your part may prevent a serious outbreak of food poisoning. When the source of contamination is determined and the food confiscated, much unnecessary suffering will be avoided.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. G. G. Q.—What causes frequent headaches?

A.—This may due to a number of causes. It would be well to have a thorough physical examination to determine the cause.

In conducting his campaign almost entirely by means of his radio forum, Mr. Magee aims to reach the people directly, without connection with party or factional organizations.

Questions from the public-at-large will be welcomed and answered in subsequent broadcasts.

Politics in the Modern Manner

Former Mayor William A. Magee who introduces something new in the political picture tonight when he opens a series of thrice-weekly broadcasts over WCAE. His campaign as a candidate for City Council will be conducted almost entirely by radio. During the 15-minute programs, to be heard each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings at 7:15, Mr. Magee will answer questions on municipal projects and policies. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Local Highlights On WJAS Tonight

"A Rose in a Garden," a vocal arrangement by Ralph Federer, of the famous Nocturne in E Flat by Chopin, is the promised high spot of Paul Gannon's 6:45 program.

Broadcasters Draft Code For NRA

By AIRCASTER

The broadcasting industry is at last working on an NRA code... It is unique because the industry is a sort of hybrid of professions ...Artists, under the document, will not fall within the labor and wage provisions...But the clerks, announcers and engineers probably will.

The announcer is the big problem...He may be an artist, and he may not...Strangely enough, he fills the same status to radio as a reporter does to a newspaper.

* * *

What! No Critics?

Radio artists report that fans who write letters have gone soft because not one letter in 100 goes in for direct criticism any more.

Don Carney is arranging a new series of the memorable Main Street sketches for Edith Caldwell, Birmingham (Ala.) singer, who won the statewide audition in her native place.

Howard Marsh's home grown dahlia, which he will exhibit at the fall dahlia show, will be called "sponsor" because it's a rare species, he says.

* * *

Studio Etiquette

Now comes a book authorized by Dr. Cline M. Koon, a government radio specialist in education by radio, who lays down a set of etiquette rules for broadcasting artists . . . and even announcers.

Announcers are instructed to do everything possible to make studio speakers comfortable and at ease . . .

Political speakers are warned that they defeat their own purpose when they try to force conclusions down the listeners' throats.

Artists and actors must, to be mannerly, think and live the parts they are playing in front of the mike . . .

Sneezing, rattling manuscripts, walking, tapping the feet, clearing the throat, etc., are considered very bad manners.

He Got the Cup

Richard Gordon, the air's Sherlock, wires that it isn't so that, as printed, he refused to go to Washington to receive a gold cup, which he won in a national contest.

The yarn which he says is untrue, stated that he had refused to pay his fare, believing that was his sponsor's responsibility. He says the sponsor did pay the fare and that he has the cup.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

It was at Wellsburg, during the second act of the performance, that the news came to the Goldenrod, Capt. Menke's showboat, that one of the stars of the show had inherited a fortune. His fellow (and girl) actors, all Carnegie Tech students, could hardly wait for the final curtain to congratulate Clayton Thompson on whom fortune had seemingly been so generous.

The news trickled into Pittsburgh where many classmates sighed just as many "Ohs" and "Ahs." But they sighed in vain. The inherited $250,000 was just a myth. Somebody was taken for the well know campus "buggy" ride.

Can we help Mrs. D. E. Dobbins, of 3240 Fourth avenue, Beaver Falls? A hymn that she valued highly is lost. Its title is "When Mother Prayed." She would like to have another copy of the hymn.

CHICAGO GANGS SPLIT, BROKEN, NOW ON RUN

Editor's note—International News Service assigned James L. Kilgallen to write a series of articles on the present gangster-racketeer situation in Chicago. In this, the first story, he tells what Chicago's public enemies are doing today and how they are faring since the downfall of Al Capone.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—The "public enemies" of Chicago—swaggering "big shots" in the heyday of Al Capone—are today a disorganized lot, split up into small factions and, generally speaking, "on the run."

Some of them have turned to new occupations since the downfall of Capone and the legalization of beer. Some are in prison. Some are selling beer. Others have switched to racketeering on legitimate businesses. One is a kidnaper. Several are "inactive." One has been selling ice cream bars near the World's Fair.

Al Capone is convict No. 40,866 at the federal penitentiary in Atlanta, where he is doing a 10-year "stretch" for income tax evasion. When the huge gates of Atlanta prison closed behind him May 4, 1932, it marked the beginning of the downfall of the greatest gangster organization in the history of the world.

HUMPHREYS NO. 1

"Public Enemy No. 1" (police listing) is Murray Humphreys, who got into "bad company" and "made good." Humphreys was regarded as the brains" of another remnants of the one-time Capone organization. He is now "on the run," indicted for income tax evasion and racketeering.

No. 2 on the list is William ("Three-fingered Jack") White, long a police figure whose particular forte has been the outlaw union. He has been fairly successful in lining up such an organization.

No. 3, William ("Klondike") O'Donnell, is still in the beer business.

"Machine Gun" Jack McGurn, No. 4, a former Capone man, is now a legitimate broker. There are no charges against him. He plays a lot of golf.

No. 5, Frank Nitti, so-called "big man" with Capone, has finished a term of a year in Leavenworth Penitentiary for income tax violation. Since he got out he was shot by a policeman.

SELLS ICE CREAM

"Public Enemy No. 6," Frank Diamond, formerly known as the "strong arm" type, is out of the rackets. Last heard of he was selling ice cream bars in the vicinity of the Century of Progress.

Joe Saltis, No. 7, is reported to be running a brewery.

No. 8, Edward (Spike) O'Donnell, is supposed to be out of the rackets.

No. 12, Michael (Bubs) Quinlan, a former beer runner, is now out of the rackets.

39 PUBLIC ENEMIES

The police, in all, listed 39 men as "public enemies." This article has told of the first 12. Others include Roger Touhy, under arrest in St. Paul, charged with kidnaping; Tony (Mops) Volpe, an ex-Capone man, who has been ordered deported to Italy, and Sam (Golf Bag) Hunt, who is supposed to be still with the remnants of the old Capone outfit. They called him "Golf Bag" because he carried a machine gun in his golf bag.

Capone's brother, Ralph, is in the McNeill (Wash.) penitentiary serving a three-year term for income tax evasion. Philip D'Andrea, arrested in court with a gun on his hip while Al Capone was being tried, is now in the trucking business. Terry Druggan, wildcat brewery owner, is doing time in Atlanta. His former partner, Frankie Lake, is in the ice business in Detroit after serving a year and a half at Leavenworth for income tax violation.

The "king of the bombers," James (Bomber) Belcastro, was arrested the other day on a vagrancy charge.

POWERS HELP AUSTRIA

PARIS, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Immediate aid to depression-stricken Austria by lifting the restrictions against Austrian exports is being arranged by France and England and probably by Italy, it was learned on high authority today.

France proposes to remove or readjust her quotas on goods from Austria pending consideration of a vast economic reorganization of Austria and Hungary and the little entente nations, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania.

The French plan, officials said, contemplates prompt aid as essential to remedy Austria's grave situation, and it is believed here that Italy and England take the same view.

German Student Held As Spy at Gibraltar

GIBRALTER, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—A German student, Carl Thodor Wuppermann, was arrested by the military authorities yesterday afternoon when, they alleged, they found him sketching and photographing military posts on the upper rock.

Wuppermann was in police court this morning and was remanded in custody until tomorrow.

U. S. RECEIVES NAZI APOLOGY

International News Service.

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—Alfred Ernst, division commander of the Berlin Nazi storm troopers, today called on United States Ambassador William E. Dodd, formally expressing regrets over the beating received by Dr. Daniel Mulvihill by a storm trooper last week.

Mulvihill, who is connected with the Long Island College Hospital, received a staggering blow behind the ear from a trooper who was angered when the American failed to give a passing Nazi parade the Nazi salute.

The guilty trooper has been taken into custody and will be summarily dealt with, according to official announcements. It has also been decreed, foreigners in Germany need not give the German colors or officials Nazi salutes, and that troopers attacking foreigners face expulsion from the Nazi party.

Ambassador Dodd accepted the expression of regret unsmilingly. The entire formality occupied but two minutes. Ernst was attired in the uniform of a Nazi storm trooper for the occasion.

Beauty Contest Marks Boat Ride

GERMAN ACTS ASSAILED BY ZIONISTS

PRAHA, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Taking the opening address of their president, Dr. Nahum Sokolow, as a keynote, 332 delegates to the eighteenth world Zionist Congress today considered ways of bringing Zionism before the world. The venerable leader said:

"The Jewish question, in all its terrible nakedness, must by this tribunal be set before the world and before Israel."

A demand for a protest against anti-Jewish acts in Germany was voiced by Vladimir Jabotinsky, leader of right wing Zionists whose goal is a Jewish state in Palestine. He said:

"We are conducting a war on murderers. Not only should we arm the enemy, but destroy him, not only with the boycott, but politically, supporting all existing forces against him in order to isolate Germany from the civilized world."

Dr. Sokolow denied any hatred of Germany.

"Indeed," he declared, "we are friends of Germany and admirers of her culture. We desire peace. But when it is a question of our existence and our honor, we must lift our voice.

"We cannot overcome this tragedy by discouragement and self-debasement, nor by agitation and passionate speeches. In this fatal time of trouble we must lose faith neither in humanity nor in ourselves. We do not wish to add fuel to the flames, bue we demand truth and peace. The Jewish question, in all its terrible nakedness, must by this tribunal be set before the world and before Israel."

The congress court yesterday, ruling on the objections of Hadassah, women's Zionist organization, to the seating of the American delegation, held the complaint justified and allowed one more seat to the Hadassah group, making the American representation 30 in all. Capt. Abraham Tulin, of New York, will fill the extra mandate.

A testimonial banquet for William M. Turner, burgess of Wilkinsburg, recommended for appointment as Pittsburgh postmaster, has been set for September 7, by a committee of his Wilkinsburg friends. It will be held at Elks' Temple, 742 Ross avenue.

James L. Quinn will be toastmaster, and David L. Lawrence and Mrs. Carroll Miller, Democratic leaders, will be speakers. F. W. Weir is general chairman.

There is a Stomach Line

Worry, anxiety or other emotions of that group, along with modern eating of certain foods and other causes, are the reasons many people suffer with a stomach. The stomach is not able to neutralize them. Nature's warning of gas, belching, bloating, headache, sourness, bad breath, heartburn, lack of pep, and even pain may be the first signal of stomach ulcers, indigestion, gastritis, dyspepsia, frequent colds, and constipation, which have been induced by a gastric-hyperacidic condition.

A Doctor's prescription, known as Toma Tablets, has proved itself to many thousands that they can soon forget the stomach line. Also included with each bottle are valuable food suggestions. Don't be tormented any longer. Write today for our interesting booklet, "Your Stomach and You." Just send your name to

·RELIEF·

FROM HAY FEVER AND ASTHMA

By the Installation of "Pittsburg"-Frigidaire Air-Conditioning

Experiments by a famous hospital prove that proper "air-conditioning" gives quick relief to sufferers from Hay Fever and Pollen Asthma. Now, through the combined efforts of "Pittsburg" and Frigidaire, this same atmosphere, used in the hospital, is made available for your home. The air can be cleansed of all dirt, dust and flower pollen by filtration—freshened and enlivened by washing—cooled or heated.

Read About the Experiment at Johns Hopkins Hospital!

Dr. Gay, who conducted this experiment in a special air-conditioned room in Johns Hopkins Hospital, says: "...for individuals who can make provision for such atmosphere, whether in their homes or offices, great relief can be offered." If you suffer from these ailments, come to our office and see a complete, practical demonstration of the air-conditioning we can put in your home.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

Though many a luncheon and tea table is usually buzzing in mid-August with the conversation of returned summer travelers, home prepared for a gay round of early fall events, this year finds them home for a few days, and off again to the four corners.

The senior William Christopher Robinsons, who have just returned from a prolonged cruise on their yacht, Viator, are leaving again tonight on another yacht trip. They will be accompanied by a party of friends. Their daughter, Mary, was expected home from Canada yesterday.

The C. A. Joneses are at Birchwood Cottage, Ojibway Island, Georgian Bay, Canada. The A. M. Kennedys, of Beaver road, Sewickley, plan to return a week from Saturday from their cottage at Madison-on-the-Lake, where they have been for the summer.

Mary Childs, who, with her brother, James H. Childs, Jr., has been in the West, has just returned. Louis Trainer is home from Ahmic Lake, Canada, where he was a guest at the Don Roses' camp. Eleanor Hyde is leaving soon to join her mother, Mrs. Charles Hyde, at Rock Island, Port Sydney, Muskoka Lakes region.

The Stanley Lyons and their small son, Charles, are at their summer place on an island at Manitou Dock, Georgian Bay, swimming and fishing. They'll return by Labor Day. Their niece, Charlotte Lyon, who has been with them, recently joined her grandmother, Mrs. Walter Lyon and her sister, Magdelaine Lyon, at their Lake Erie cottage.

To Return Labor Day

The Prescott Lyons are closing their Orchard terrace, Sewickley, place and moving to Pittsburgh the latter part of next month, because their daughters, Sally and Hester, are to attend the Ellis School this winter.

Travellers' Club To Study East Next Year

The familiar purple-lettered-on-ivory year book of the Travellers' Club has made its appearance for another season with programs on "Echoes from the Far East." Study, of course, will not begin until after president's day, which is set for September 26, honoring Mrs. W. H. Kuhl.

"The New Creative Epoch of the Far East," "The East and the West; Shall They Ever Meet?" and readings from "Mr. and Mrs. Sen" will inaugurate the programs. Then comes a civic day with a speaker, music and a sale of blind-made goods.

Next listed are "Great Britain's Experiment in India," an open forum on current events and reading from "The Public Square." After discussing "Leaders of Japan" the members will hear whether Japan is justified in her Manchurian policy, and after "Leaders of China" comes a paper on "The Reconstruction of China Out of Chaos."

The Christmas party precedes study of Russia, with "What Russia Has Done in Manchuria" and "Is It a Risk to Trade With Russia?" as the assigned subjects. "The Status of Women in the Far East," "China's War Lords," "Life, Work and Play in Japan," "The Geisha Girls," "What Have the Last Three Viceroys Done for India?" "India's Non-Violent Revolution," "What Did Lord Lytton Report from China and Japan?" "Japan's Reply to the Lytton Report," "The Chinese Love of the Beautiful," "What Would Make the Strongest Appeal to a Traveler in the Far East?" are among topics which will come up at subsequent meetings.

Also scheduled are a musicale, a drama day, the annual meeting with election of officers and the closing outing.

SUCCESSFUL FASHIONS PROVE INFLUENCE ON JEWELRY TYPES

THE PROGRESS of dress fashions definitely influences the jeweler. A relation must, of course, exist between the two. The jeweler borrows inspiration wholesale from the dress, fabric and color trends. The dress designer often supplies the need for a new clip, a new use of an old stone, an innovation in design.

* * *

FOR INSTANCE, the vogue for sparkling stones in elaborate designs is the direct outcome of the revival of elegance in fashions. Today, for daytime as well as for evening, we wear jewels that glitter brilliantly, nodding approval of the new elaborate mode. A duet-clip, of exquisitely mounted rhinestones, is a beautiful but practical fillip, since it can be changed with a snap of the fingers from a brooch to two clips! The possibilities for transforming a neckline are unlimited.

* * *

PRESENT-DAY coiffures are sleek and the hair tightly curled at the ends. Often the curls are piled high in an upward movement—a fashion which encourages the use of hair ornaments, if one is so inclined, and also explains the continued popularity of ear decorations. Of newer interest are the rhinestones or diamante ear-line earrings, shaped to conform to the outline of a lady's dainty earlobes. Marcasite, as far as we can make out, will be stronger than ever this year. You may prefer these new earrings of this brilliant metal.

* * *

THE NEW silhouette is straight and simple. It requires accents to bring out the feeling of luxury it's meant to create. That gives jewelry a perfect opportunity. Semi-precious stones, like jade, lapis, amethyst-quartz, rose-quartz and carnelian will be seen again. They go so well with the new greys, blue and brown tones we are wearing. One particularly lovely set, of exquisite Chinese rose gold filligree illustrates another point. Detailed mountings have not been seen often these last few years. Fine workmanship and delicate designings are returning, however, for costume jewelry.

* * *

THE GROUP in the lower right in the accompanying sketch, of lapis mounted on dull hand-polished gold, gives you some idea of their beautiful delicacy. The newer high necklines are often softened by jeweled accents and, to do this, the design also includes a necklace somewhat longer than usual, brooch and clips to match.

* * *

* * *

FLEXIBLE WOOD, used for accessories, continues its popularity. For sports, the bamboo and prystal combinations are unusual, even a bit bizarre. They look heavy and cumbersome, but in the hand they amaze one by their lightness. With tweeds and woolens, the grained accessories go well.

2 EXONERATED IN MINE SLAYING

County detectives today exonerated Tony Moroco and Joe Warren of any connection in the murder of Frank Joy, 44-year-old Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company employe, whose body was found last week in a coal mine, Patton Township.

Judge Elder W. Marshall yesterday signed a writ of habeas corpus on petition of Attorney A. C. Scales, of Greensburg.

In releasing the pair from the County Jail, Detective Chief George W. Murren said his men had investigated their stories and were convinced the men had nothing to do with the slaying.

The winches of the Navy supply ship Vega swung ashore 54,550 fur-seal pelts, stored in barrels. The shipment was valued at upwards of a million and half dollars.

Wife of Governor, Sister to Talk Over 40 Years

PHOENIX, Ariz., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—What the wife of the Governor of Arkansas says to the sister she is visiting here probably would require volumes to record. They had not seen each other for 40 years until yesterday.

Mrs. Tera Futrell, wife of Gov. J. M. Futrell, was accompanied on the visit to Mrs. H. E. Heathington by her son, Dan F. Futrell; her daughter, Mrs. Grady McCull and her grandchildren, Betty Louise and Mary Frances McCull.

NUDISTS PLAN NEW COLONY

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Five groups of Chicago nudists met in a lawyer's office here yesterday and announced plans for a colony three miles north of the Illinois state line near Kenosha, Wis.

The colony, according to K. K. Krippene, the attorney for the group, plans to begin operation next spring and already an option on a 250-acre wooded estate has been obtained.

One of the sponsors said that the colony would be divided into women's groups, men's groups and a children's division. Particular emphasis, he said, would be placed upon the training of children to make their bodies strong and beautiful.

AXMAN SAVED ON GLACIER

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The Mazamas, Portland mountain climbing group, added another rescue to their long list today after bringing an injured youth, David Pence, of Chicago, down the precipitous and frozen Jefferson Park glacier on Mt. Jefferson.

Pence, a civilian conservation corps worker, had fallen on the glacier and suffered a fractured ankle and a deep leg wound. His companions, Ray Kuemmel and Steve Sopocy, fought high winds, fog and snow to reach the vacationing Mazamas, who immediately sent out an expedition.

At an altitude of 9,000 feet they were unable to stand against the howling gale. Then 500 feet below, they saw Pence, and two men were standing guard over him. Pence was taken out on a stretcher, the rescuers making slow progress over the treacherous ice fields on the mountain side.

GANDHI WEAKER ON 7TH DAY

POONA, India, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The Mahatma Gandhi grew weaker during his seventh day without food today, but the legislative council was told his condition had not yet become critical.

The remark was made in reply to a question as to why his wife is compelled to leave her husband's bedside at 8 each night.

When the Nationalist leader's condition warrants, it is said, his wife and relatives will be allowed to remain with him.

Gandhi is engaged in a "fast unto death" because authorities refuse to grant him concessions in Yeroda jail for conducting his campaign for the untouchable class.

Mirabai, the former Madeline Slade, English disciple of Gandhi, was released from Sabarmati jail at Ahmedabad today at the expiration of a one-year sentence for defying a government ban against her appearance in the Bombay district.

Snake Dancers Bring Shower To Hopiland

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Rain has begun to fall at last on Hopiland after the prayers of the snake dancers.

Five days ago, at Mishongnovi, the Indians who woo annually the favor of the plumed water serpent, rain god of the underworld, performed their rites, but not a drop of water came from the sky.

But yesterday, when the rites had been performed again, this time at Polaca, scattered showers were reported on the mesa lands.

MARKET HOUSE COST BOOSTED

North Side businessmen have increased their estimate of the cost of remodeling the North Side Market House to $250,000 because of increased labor and material costs, according to their attorney, Harland I. Casteel.

This represents a $50,000 increase over their previous figure. Efforts to obtain the money from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are to be made through the State Board of the Federal Recovery Administration at Harrisburg.

A longer lease on the market, 15 rather than 10 years from the city, is also being sought, and the proposition is being studied now by City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt.

The state board meets today in Harrisburg with J. C. Trees, of Pittsburgh, chairman. Plans for the improved market are to be forwarded to the board's engineer, Maj. William H. Gravell.

POPEYE'S PARTY 3 DAYS AWAY

Only three more days until the biggest birthday party of the year takes place—good old Popeye's. The big affair that has already excited the boys and girls of Pittsburgh is scheduled for Kennywood Park next Friday, and one of the largest crowds of the year is expected.

It isn't, however, to be like Lucky Buck Day last year. Precautions have been taken to keep the attendance to a size that will insure everyone's comfort.

The long strips of free tickets for rides and concessions are now ready for distribution at exchange stations in your neighborhood and listed elsewhere in today's Sun-Telegraph. The 15-cent street car passes good for Kennywood from any part of Pittsburgh on Popeye's birthday are also on sale at the same exchange stations.

Rhea's has already begun to make Popeye's birthday cake and it is going to be a giant. Popeye will cut it for distribution to youngsters at the party.

It has developed that there are a lot of young Popeyes and Olive Oyls among the boys and girls of Pittsburgh. The best of them will be awarded prizes.

$75,000 Blaze Ruins Phila. Club Buildings

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—City firemen answering three alarms today saved the main building of the North East Shrine Club, just across the city line in Rockledge, from fire, but three other buildings operated by the club were wrecked.

An auditorium, bowling alley and connecting building were swept by the flames and the main building, operated as a hotel, suffered from tons of water. The loss was estimated at $75,000.

MADRID, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Police, acting for the first time under the press section of the public order law, yesterday confiscated an edition of the newspaper La Nacion, which commented humorously on a recent nationwide roundup of persons said to have been connected with a plot against the government.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Memos I Forgot to Remember

He is a well known newspaperman, who always had plenty of plenty until both Worlds collapsed, and because he is about 50, he had a difficult time getting another job. Some time last Winter he got one of those Emergency Unemployment jobs, at $21 per week. On the strength of this connection he sent his wife away for a vacation with some friends.

When they were motoring near her home they crashed and the wife perished from the severe injuries. Now, it seems that on these Emergency Relief jobs you must appear at that office every morning and make a report, whether you work or not—or you lose your job. During his wife's decline into her death he naturally didn't "think" to sign in. But when she was finally buried he went there and explained why. And what do you think he was told?

He was forgiven for not appearing every day due to his terrible ordeal. But he no longer had that job because he no longer had dependents!

It is a good thing that the widow Costello was tried in Salem and not on Broadway or in Hollywood. Seventeen playwrights and about 30 scenario writers, who thought they could read a jury's mind, rushed through their respective manuscripts for immediate production of the famous mystery.

Here's a groan for you. He's a nobody and his name wouldn't matter anyway. But it remained for him to figure out a new way to rid himself of a woman. A year ago he started writing flop flickers in Hollywood, where he encountered a former Ziegfeld girl, who fell for his line. After a year of her—he switched to another lass. What to do about the first? He persuaded a pal connected with the courts there to frame and jail her for "sinning"—rather than defray her transportation back to Broadway.

Irene Castle still remains a top-notcher as America's foremost ballroom dancer, to hear her admirers tell it. Miss Castle, however, doesn't kid herself. Recently while in New York she was urged to appear in vaudeville. "No," she said, "I'm not that good any more. I have lived a long time wearing the crown of being the ace—just because I wore clothes well or something. But the kids nowadays dance ever so much better than I ever did."

Then, on second thought, she revealed her well known sense of humor. "Tell you what," she told the booking men, "I'll play one week at Radio City Music Hall—it's so large — nobody could hear my joints creak."

Some legislation makes me sick. But the victims of recently new bills probably are sicker.

Those bills, we mean, "sandpapering" the sharp teeth in local alimony laws do not apply to the poor devils now in jails. They apply only to the new cases!

Of course too many readers won't believe it—but it really happened at an all-night cafe a few months ago. After a dinner party thrown for Mr. Woollcott by the George S. Kaufmans at their place, Dorothy Parker agreed to have us escort her home. We paused, however, at the night club, and Miss Parker was bored with the proceedings until this new thrill happened.

A waiter brought word that an admirer of Miss Parker's in the place was sending over some wine. Later the admirer himself joined us. He was visiting New York, he remarked, and soon would return to the Mid-West where he is a famously known member of a mob. The fact he and the law couldn't jell didn't thrill Dorothy Parker. What excited her was that this member of the banditti remembered dozens of her poems by heart!

Not long ago a man we know, suddenly come to wealth, moved into a swanky apartment and made sure of his improved station in life by ordering one of those private, unlisted telephone numbers that all important people think they should have. The phone was duly installed, but when the fellow glanced at his new toy he was startled to see that the card on which the number should have been written was naked.

He promptly picked up the phone, called the main office and asked to be informed what his number was. He was stiffly informed that the number was private and could be given out to no one. He then called the higher ups and got the same replies. He even wrote a letter which was also snubbed. His wife, however, delivered herself in person before the general manager, indignantly explained the situation and learned the number.

You cannot get Joan Crawford to admit the fact—but her intimates will. So opposed were her in-laws to her marriage to Doug, Jr., that Miss Crawford was not asked or permitted at "Pickfair" until eight months after the wedding. She went once and then did her own snubbing.

I've always wondered about it, too. I mean about those condemned men at Sing Sing, who are supposed to devour tremendous portions of this and that at their last meals. Every time they roast a man in the chair there—the rags tell you how big their appetites were just before going through the "little Green Door" which happens to be brown.

The other night a man who did a long stretch there blasted the "cooked up" stories that come out of Sing Sing. The men who die rarely have any desire for food, just as you suspected all along. But those huge and fancy meals you read about are true. The condemned, knowing that they may order what they like and get it—order double of the best things—and instead of eating them—instruct that the meals be given to pals there.

Which is more like it. And easier to believe.

Walt Disney Plans New Shorts

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22.—This year's short subject sensation is Walt Disney's Silly Symphony, "The Three Little Pigs." Since the release of this one-reeler, the Disney Studio has been swamped with requests for the animation of more fairy tales and nursery rhymes.

Yielding to popular demand, Disney has set his staff of 125 men to work on an adaptation of Hans Christian Anderson's "Shepherdess and the Chimney Sweep."

Mr. Disney

A total of 13 Silly Symphonies, all in color, will be made this year. These in addition to the Adventures of Mickey Mouse, which are done in black and white.

And another thing. Disney promises there will be more Tinkley Tunes like "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?" Frank Churchill, head of the studio music department, is to write original songs for many of the new cartoons.

A group of old-timers were reminiscing about the lean days of the past. I like the one W. C. Fields tells about the coin-juggler at a poorly attended country fair. On the first day, the juggler's act lasted 19 minutes. On the second day, it dropped to 15 minutes. Each day, thereafter, it became a little shorter. Finally, the manager said:

The juggler eyed him reproachfully.

"Matter," he said, "what do you think I've been eating on?"

Director Frank Borzage, they'll tell you, is not as sold as he used to be on making a picture for a percentage of the profits. After waiting two months for Spencer Tracy, he started "A Man's Castle." Right away came the strike. Now, with the picture well under way, Helen Mackellar is taken ill and will have to be replaced by Marjorie Rambeau.

Meanwhile Elmer Rice, author of the play, has arrived in Hollywood from Mexico City to work on the screen version. It's his second trip to Hollywood. Samuel Goldwyn brought him out for "Street Scene."

Victor Jory Signed For Leading Role

Victor Jory, who scored an overnight hit as the barker in "State Fair," has been signed by Columbia Pictures for the male lead opposite Helen Twelvetrees in "My Woman," which bore the working title "Goin' to Town." The story which deals with the rise and fall of a radio crooner, was written by Brian Marlow. Wallace Ford was signed recently for a featured role. Victor Schertzinger is directing, and also composed the musical numbers to be sung in the feature.

Love On Capri Is Germ of Comedy

By GEORGE SEIBEL

There's no South Wind blowing through Helen H. Mason's new comedy, "Three To Make Ready," which had its world premiere last night at the Arnold School as the original production of the Summer Playhouse, but there are many happy lines which put the amiable audience into even better humor.

Mr. Seibel

No south wind blowing means that the airy playlet is devoid of anything like atmosphere, and might as well be laid on Long Island as Capri. Indeed, since they are waiting for a car to cross three or four miles of water to the Amalfi Drive, it probably was Long Island or Westchester. Even the Italian girl Tina, played by Mathilda Bodycombe, was neither cassata nor ravioli. Still it must have been Capri, because they talked about the Blue Grotto.

Only one of the five characters in the comedy was consistently conceived, properly cast and adequately acted. That was Natalie—played by Polly Rowles with zest and snap. Her mother, presented by Rosalind Wikander, was saccharine when she should have been "arty."

Robert Gill, playing another of those teething authors, doesn't know whether he is going to Russia or to Florence or to Tina's uncle, nor with which of the three women—he is that sort of a lay figure. The other man, a scientist who writes odes with a rhyming dictionary, has at least one merit—he doesn't fall in love with Tina. William Koehler also looked as if he might bombard atoms, but his conversation was as literary as the remainder of the dialogue.

That is the primary fault of this comedy—it is literary, not alive. The characters wander on and off ad lib., they are no sooner acquainted than they talk flippantly to each other, they no sooner insult each other than they fall in love, and then with a decorous kiss or two in Capri they propose to flit to the Dolomites or the Volga. But they never go anywhere—if they do, they come back.

That is the second fault of the comedy—it doesn't get anywhere. If there was a plot, someone forgot it like the author's pajamas. If there is any conflict, it was all tucked away in the witty dialogue. If there was a climax, the curtain dropped before it came. With an undoubted gift for verbal fireworks, and a flair for character in sophisticated mood, Miss Mason has missed the mark in "Three to Make Ready." But Polly Rowles still makes it go. And while it is going, it is enjoyable as repartee, if not as drama.

The End of a Search.

THE SPEAKEASY was almost deserted. Two or three customers were draped over the bar. A lone bartender was idly polishing glasses. There was a single occupant at one of the tables. He sat there motionless, tight-lipped. He had been sitting there since midnight, a half-filled glass in front of him, staring straight ahead at nothing at all.

"Like to buy you a drink," he mumbled. "Stranger around here? Come here a lot and never remember seeing you before."

"Yes." His words were clipped. "Never been in here before. Wouldn't be here now, only I'm looking for a man."

Looking for a man. John Bates had been looking for a man for 10 long months. A man who had ruined his entire life and whom he knew only by name. A man whom he hated with a violent and murderous frenzy and had never seen. But he felt instinctively that he would know him when they met face to face. And he had a very definite idea of what he was going to do when he found that man.

He had been searching for 10 months, but he had been hating for two years. It was two years since Mary had left him, leaving not even a note. He had been forced to learn through acquaintances that the man she had gone with was George Harris.

The months that followed his wife's desertion were torture for John Bates. The ruining of all his dreams for the future and the discovery of his wife's infidelity had nearly driven him mad. He believed that he had suffered all it was possible for a man to suffer. That was before he learned that Mary had died.

He learned that through acquaintances, too. Learned that George Harris had taken her to a neighboring city and left her there after a few brief months, sick and with no means of support.

It was too late when John found that out. Mary had died. And, in John's mind, the blame of the entire sordid mess fell upon George Harris, the man he had vowed to find if it took the remaining years of his life.

From that day on, he was a man possessed by a mania. He asked nothing from life except to be allowed to meet George Harris face to face. And when he did meet him—well, it was all very simple and clear to John.

He would kill Harris. Shoot him down. That was the only happiness that was left to him now. The consequences did not matter. He would die content.

He sold the home where he had spent the only happy years he knew. He disposed of his small business. The money he spent in trailing the man whom he knew to be responsible for the death of the woman he loved, was, in his eyes, money well spent.

There were long weeks of discouragement. Days when it appeared that his search was hopeless. Then, finally, a small glimmer of hope. He learned that George Harris was in the city. That George Harris spent much of his leisure time in a spot known simply as Joe's.

So John Bates was sitting at a table in Joe's. Tight-lipped. Motionless. Staring straight ahead of him at nothing at all, but seeing every man who entered and left. He felt instinctively that he would know George Harris if he met him face to face.

He looked at the man who had spoken to him.

"I'm waiting for someone," he repeated.

The other man sat down uninvited.

"I seen you sitting her," he murmured, "all alone by yourself all night. Thought maybe you'd wanta drink with me."

John shook his head, studying the man carefully.

"I'm not drinking much," he said shortly.

"I never used to come to these places much," his companion offered, "only sometimes a man gets thinking. I guess there's some things he's better off forgettting."

John looked at him with new interest.

"Yeah?" he prodded.

"Yeah." The man laughed uneasily. "I guess most people got something locked inside 'em they wouldn't want everybody to know about."

He hesitated for a moment and then laughed again.

"I was thinking," he went on, "When you said you were looking for someone, I wouldn't want to be the guy, the way you look."

He rambled on, talking of nothing in particular. Then he rose.

"Well, I guess I better be shoving off."

He fumbled about in his pocket, drew out a creased bill, a bunch of keys and a wallet, and dropped them on the table in front of him.

"Say," he began, "I forgot to ——"

He never finished the sentence. For John Bates had glanced down. His eyes had fastened on the driver's license encased in the front of the wallet. His breath was coming heavily and he was staring down at the name and address on the license.

"George Harris," it read. "— West —th street."

His hand went automatically to his pocket. His temples and pulses were pounding, but he was conscious only of an overpowering surge of joy. His search was at an end. The moment he had been waiting for all these months was here at last. The man he had been looking for was staring open-mouthed across the the table at the gun in his hand.

John Bates uttered but one word—an oath. There was a spurt of flame, and the man on the other side of the table crumpled in a heap on the floor.

They locked Bates up, of course. He made no effort to get away after the murder. He admitted freely that he had killed the man deliberately.

"And I'm glad," he breathed, like a person from whose mind a great load had been lifted.

If John Bates was happy, there were others who were not. The bartender was muttering nervously about disposing of the body.

"I wish you'd get that stiff outa here," he begged. "Gee, its gonna be tough enough now, having this happen here. I thought that bird musta been kinda screwy, the way he was sitting there all alone, all night."

The man from police headquarters was examining the contents of the dead man's pockets.

"Something kinda funny here," he grunted. "George Harris—that this guy? That's the name on his wallet. And yet he's got a lot of loose bills in his pockets, and the leters are all addressed to somebody by the name of Jones. Did you know him?"

The bartender nodded.

"Yeah," he assented, "the dead guy's name is Jones all right. He was a steady customer. The other feller—the guy named Harris—was in just before midnight, stewed to the gills.

"He dropped his wallet around some place and Jones picked it up. He was gonna give it back to Harris tomorrow." . . .

AMELIA'S PET OCELOT DIES

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—David B. Putnam, 20-year-old explorer, who is six-foot three, arrived from South America yesterday on the Porto Rico liner Borinquen. He brought a tarantula and a poisonous snake well preserved in a bottle.

In the dense jungles of British Guiana, Putnam captured a young ocelot, an animal of the appearance, temperament and disposition of a leopard. It was to have been a present for his stepmother, Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam.

But when he landed at Martinique, the ocelot, which he said had become very affectionate—to him—got tangled up in its rope inside the cage and strangled.

Putnam was a member of the La Varre Brazilian-Guiana expedition formed to discover the source of gold and diamonds in the headwaters of certain South American rivers. He left the expedition to join a new air line sponsored by Mrs. Putnam.

JAPANESE BAN U. S. RADICAL

TOKIO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Alexander Bruckman, of Cleveland, was arrested during a police drive against "foreign radicals and pacifists" today and ordered to leave Japan immediately.

The American, who is 22 and a former student in Case School of Applied Science, was charged with communicating with Japanese radicals since his arrival here from the United States two months ago. He left for Kobe today and will sail for Shanghai tomorrow.

Police said Bruckman professed to be a Communist and said he was expelled from Case because of radical agitation.

He said he intends to participate in an international conference against war scheduled to open in Shanghai September 1.

GIRL DETECTS PURSE THIEVES

When Miss Blanche Malerhofer, clerk in Reymer and Brothers offices, Forbes and Pride streets, entered the rest room late yesterday afternoon, she saw two small Negro boys slipping out through a window, she told police. A check-up revealed that the purses of Mrs. Margaret Woshner and her daughter, Helen, also Reymer employes who live at 136 East Agnes street, Carrick, had been stolen.

Mrs. Woshner's purse, she said, contained a wrist watch and $6. Police discovered the boys had pried loose a screen to gain entrance.

A thief entered the J. W. Singer & Company dress shop, 533 East Ohio street, and stole the purse of Mary M. Ward, a clerk, late yesterday. The bag contained $15 in cash and a ring valued at $35.

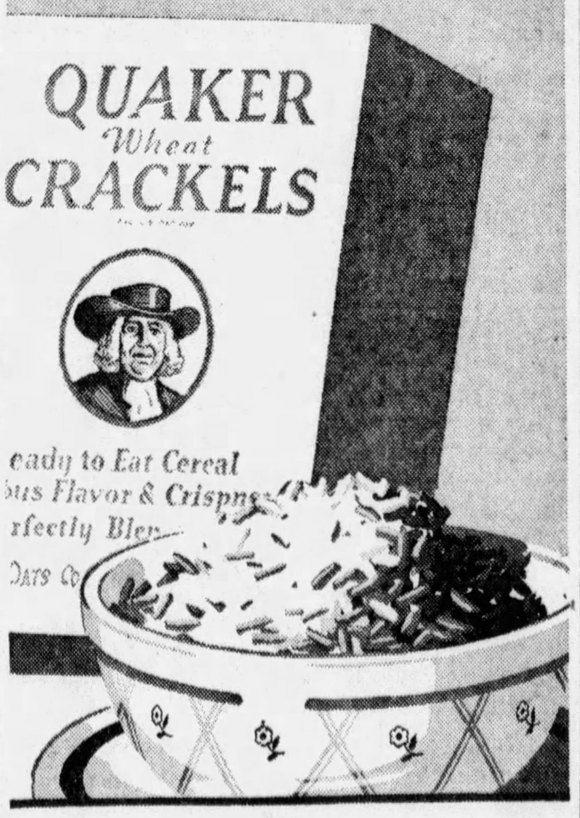
Wheat Crackels!



THROW away your old ideas about regulation cereals. And enjoy breakfast as you never enjoyed it before! For a new, modern, up-to-the-minute cereal has just been created. Crisp. Brisk. Zestful. Different!

It's called Wheat Crackels. It's different because it's made by a just-discovered process never used in cereal making before.

How it's made

We take the rich energy parts of wheat. Compress these wheat hearts under 5000 pounds pressure to the square inch. Then the wheat is whirled in a seething cyclone of 500° of heat. It puffs. Expands. Explodes into delicious tissue-walled tidbits. Toasted and flavored to the Queen's taste.

The result is a cereal excitingly different from all others. It tastes as wheat has never tasted before. It looks exactly like delicious candy. It has a delicate, fresh crispness.

Get Wheat Crackels today from your grocer. See how wonderful it is to serve a cereal children adore. A cereal everyone likes. Serve Wheat Crackels tomorrow morning.

MANY TO ATTEND FLOOD CONTROL PARLEY TOMORROW

GARLAND GIVES SUPPORT TO M'ARDLE

Independent Council Members Solid For Colleague

Councilman Robert Garland today announced his support of Councilman P. J. McArdle, seeking the Republican mayoralty nomination.

The indorsement by Garland came on the eve of the opening of the McArdle campaign tonight in headquarters at the William Penn Hotel, when he and Edward O. Tabor, Charles Wolff, Howard McNutt and Robert N. Waddell, Council candidates indorsed by the Citizens' League, will speak.

Affiliation of Garland with the McArdle campaign places the three anti-organization members of City Council in the same camp for the primary. Councilman Charles Anderson has been actively co-operating with the Citizens' League in slate-making and campaign strategy.

Councilman Garland said his support of Mr. McArdle would be active. He said:

"I am asking all my friends to support Mr. McArdle with the full knowledge that my colleague will prove to be a Mayor who will serve the taxpayers well. He has had longer training for this office than any other candidate. As an independent and as one uncontrolled and who will stay uncontrolled, he stands out most prominently.

"Efficiency and economy must be the order of the day rather than the chasing of police officers and police magistrates from pillar to post for political purposes, and the hundreds of other methods and abuses that are practical in any city where politics rather than business conduct receives the first consideration."

J. Garfield Houston, chairman of the McArdle campaign, will preside at tonight's meeting. McArdle will outline his platform.

FIND CITY 35TH IN KILLINGS

With 51 murders — approximately seven and one-half for each 100,000 — Pittsburgh was thirty-fifth among cities of the United States in 1932, according to figures made public today by Frederick Rex, librarian for the City of Chicago.

Jacksonville, Fla., with 61, had a percentage of 43.88 to lead the list.

New York, New Orleans, Cleveland, St. Louis, Washington and Kansas City were among the cities in the brackets over Pittsburgh.

KIN HELD, GIRL BACK HOME

Andrew Duncheck, 31, is in the County Jail today, awaiting a hearing, accused of disappearing with his niece, Dolores Broggi, 17, of Gallatin. The hearing is slated for Wednesday.

County detectives arrested Duncheck in Monessen last night, after James Broggi, Gallatin politician and father of the girl, secured a warrant from Alderman Thomas Flanigan.

The girl, a graduate of Monongahela High School last year, and the uncle disappeared last Friday. The girl was returned home yesterday.

POLICE CHARGE 3 WITNESSED HILL MURDER

Only Heard Shots, Men Say, Admitting They Fled Scene

Three men held as material witnesses in the killing of Carmen Gagliano, 45, of 1609 Colwell street, August 13, were threatened with charges of being accessories to murder today by Sergt. Samuel Wheeler, of the homicide squad.

He charged they were withholding evidence, and stated they were eye witnesses to the shooting.

The men were given a hearing before Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Central Police Court, and testified they had left the house before an argument between Gagliano and Sebastian Buculo, 40, of 1609 Colwell street, reached its height.

A half block away, they said, the reports of four shots were heard.

Wheeler declared they were there.

The men gave their names as Nicolas Izzio, 43, of 1405 Bellaire place; Joseph Alo, 46, of 1643 Colwell street, and Louis Cappilongo, 54, of 1652 Colwell street. They were held over.

ENOS EMERY — ANDREW ENGELHART

SOUTH AMERICA-BOUND: ADVENTURERS LEAVING PITTSBURGH DOWN THE OHIO RIVER

2-YEAR CRUISE BEGUN BY PAIR

Aldrew Engelhart, Glenshaw, and his guest, Enos Emery, of Tucson, Ariz., have waved farewell to their sweethearts and families and have set out on their two-year trip to South America.

The two sailors, both 28, plan to sail down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to the Gulf. On the trip they will write about their experiences and try to sell the stories to magazines. If successful, they will continue their trip along the Atlantic seacoast.

Engelhart and Emery make up the third group to leave Pittsburgh this summer for points south and west via the two rivers. However, they plan the most extensive voyage and be away from home the longest. Their boat is 17½ feet long and three feet wide at the broadest point. It weighs only 75 pounds.

Old Crow Finds Perch By Eagle In Missouri

-By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER-

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 22.—Looks like Missouri added Old Crow to the Blue Eagle.

The returns show none of the votes are missing. But some of the voters are.

The lone drinkers in the Lone Star State step to the bar next Saturday. All we ask the boys is to remember what Sam Houston and Col. Bowie would do in a case like that.

Those pioneers fought for liberty in a land of alkali water, poisoned wells and salt lakes.

You can guess what they drank when they used thunder showers for chasers.

We are not seeking to influence the Texan vote next Saturday, even though the drys are using an outlaw radio station on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande.

We realize there are two sides to every case. And that's how Missouri had ordered it. By the case.

3 WOMEN HELD IN VICE CLEANUP

Three of four women arrested Saturday night in a raid on two apartments at 2033 Fifth avenue were held for court last night in $500 bond by Justice of the Peace Margaret M. Morgan, of Sewickley.

Those held, according to Justice Morgan, were Mildred Meyer, Frances Osborne and Dorothy Helmich. The fourth, Ruth Mason, was discharged for lack of evidence.

The raids were made by Constable John S. Ridge, of the Fourth Ward, who was ordered to clean up vice in his ward by Judge W. H. McNaugher.

COMPANY HEAD WILLS $27,500

To nephews, Joseph C. and W. E. Simons, he left $1,500 each; to seven other nephews and nieces $500 each; to his brother, W. H., he left $1,000 and 150 shares of Pittsburgh Reflector Company preferred stock.

Clerical employes of the company employed at least three years prior to his death are left a total of $2,500. To a friend, Robert Curtis Fiske, he left $500, fishing tackle, jewelry and a membership in the Keystone Athletic Club.

ROADHOUSE FIRE UNDER PROBE

Fire Marshal Thomas L. Pfarr is investigating the cause of a blaze which early Sunday destroyed a roadhouse known as Dad's Place in KDKA boulevard, three miles beyond Dorseyville.

He has received information, he declared, that the fire was of incendiary origin. Jacob Doles, 65, of Russelton, a watchman at the place, who was overcome by smoke, is receiving treatment in Allegheny Valley Hospital, Tarentum.

Jawbreakers Fed To Zoo Monkey, Joker Arrested

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Jocko, one of the Lincoln Park zoo monkeys, had the last laugh on Joseph Volek, 44.

Yesterday, police charge, Volek tossed a piece of butterscotch candy at Jocko and then enjoyed a hearty laugh at the monkey's frantic efforts to open its mouth after its jaws became stuck.

He was held for hearing today on a charge of feeding the animals which is against park rules.

TRI-STATE AREA RESPONDS TO MEETING

Sharon, Beaver Valley Officials to Confer With Herron

Early acceptances from mayors and burgesses of the tri-state district to the conference called for tomorrow by Mayor John S. Herron to further the project of flood prevention indicate that the conference will be well attended.

Mayor Herron has already received acceptances from mayors and burgesses representing the Sharon and Beaver Valley districts.

Others who have accepted are Lewis E. Staley, secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters; Joseph C. Trees, chairman of the NRA Public Works Advisory Board; George S. Davison, president of the Flood Commission of Pittsburgh, and Maj. W. D. Styer, district engineer for the federal government.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot today wired Mayor Herron he could not attend due to a meeting of the state recovery board in Harrisburg tomorrow. The board is organized to check on violations of the recovery act. Pinchot stated:

"I am doubly sorry because I am very much interested in flood control in the Pittsburgh district."

The project comprises a series of 10 reservoirs in the headwaters of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers and, if adopted, will cost approximately $57,000,000 and provide 12,000,000 man-days of employment. Efforts will be made to have the federal government finance the entire project.

Tomorrow's conference, which is to be held in Mayor Herron's office, is for the purpose of organizing concerted action and selecting an organization to keep the project before the proper authorities until the plan is approved.

Bandits Take $328 In Holdup of Store

While Frank Summerill, 7737 Susquehanna street, manager of the Potter-McCune Company store at 7205 Frankstown avenue, and Charles Blair, 7161 Mt. Vernon avenue, faced the wall with their arms aloft, four bandits ransacked the wholesale grocery's cash register of $328 and escaped late yesterday.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Well, the "hillbillies" beat the "dudes" and took the polo championship of the world, right out of the drawing-rooms and into the bunk house. And she won't go East in years, for the West always thought you had to have a birth certificate to play it.

Now every cowpuncher is herding in the heifers with a corn plaster saddle, and even the "hay heavers" Will Rogers have changed a pitchfork into a polo mallet. Twenty thousand Chicagoans witnessed Sunday's social massacre. Nineteen thousand of 'em had never seen a horse, much less a polo game. So from now on west of the Mississippi "old dobbin" plows in the fields only till 4 o'clock, when he will be washed and scrubbed, his teeth polished, and he goes out on the lawn to cavort in what used to be known as strictly a social recreation. Poor old society, they got nothing exclusive left.

The movie folks out-married and out-divorced 'em, the common folks took their cocktails. "Near" society took to bridge, now polo has gone to the buckwheat belt, so poor old society hasn't even been left a code.

Yours, WILL.

SLUM CLEARANCE TO BE SOUGHT

Legislation and U. S. Aid Objective of Housing Group

Legislation will be sought to make possible wholesale slum clearance in Pittsburgh with federal help, according to John Ihlder, executive director of the Pittsburgh Housing Association.

If a special session of the Legislature is called early next year, Gov. Pinchot will be asked to include in his call the objective of better housing, Ihlder stated. Such bills would provide not only for constructing new low-cost dwellings, but for removing slums to provide room for parks or other modern buildings of use to the community, he said.

Housing bills providing for limited dividend corporations with powers of eminent domain to do such work died in committee at the last session of the Legislature.

In Pittsburgh at present are more than a score of dwellings which the Housing Association has classified as dangerous. Efforts are being made through the City Bureau of Building Inspection to have them removed.

Boy Wounded When He Examines Gun

Shot when he accidentally discharged his father's revolver while examining it, James Crew, 16, Negro, of 18 Carver street, was in Pittsburgh Hospital today with a bullet wound in his left side. His condition is not serious.

Suspect Laments Lack Of Code in Burglary

Fred Herman, police-styled Ohio prison alumnus and holder of the doubtful honor of being Mt. Lebanon's only matinee burglar, today bemoaned the lack of a code of fair competition among the gentlemen of his "profession."

Said Herman, who was held for court on nine charges of larceny and entry last night by Justice of the Peace Martin K. Weitzel, of Dormont:

"There ain't no honor at all among the boys of the profession any more."

Then he cited the case of his pal:

"When that stiff seen the police coming he rushed back and handed me the stuff so he could get away quick without anything on him. That's how I happened to have that bag and knife in my hand when the coppers arrived. I was holding the bag for him and he walked out on me."

Mt. Lebanon police testified that Herman robbed six apartments and three houses in Dormont within the last few weeks. The method, police said, was to start out like a salesman, ringing doorbells. If nobody answered he would cut through the door panel, unlock the door and loot the apartment.

MAYOR PLEDGES 'HANDS OFF' SCHOOLS

Mayor John S. Herron, speaking last night in Homewood, said in the past he had done everything within his power toward the betterment of public schools. As an indorsement of his record with reference to schools he pointed out that four members of the School Board, Taylor Allderdice, N. R. Criss, Thomas Doyle and Dr. A. L. Lewine, were supporting him in his campaign for the Republican mayoralty nomination. Herron said:

"It seems to me that all candidates could well refrain from injecting the schools into politics. I have no desire in any way, shape or form to interfere with our school board or its present method of selection."

Herron's direct statement was in response to accusations that Senator James J. Coyne, his chief political backer, not only has attempted, but would again attempt, to make the school board elective, throwing it into the arena of practical politics.

Replying to a statement by J. Garfield Houston, manager for Councilman P. J. McArdle, Herron said he did not care for a scurrilous campaign, but would meet any challenge and reply in kind. He asserted that if anything suspicious in his record could be proven he would not want to be Mayor of Pittsburgh.

Herron said that 24 per cent of the 1933 revenue was necessary for interest and sinking fund charges, pointing out that these costs were necessitated by public improvements over the past two years. Despite this, he said, taxes for the year had been reduced 10 per cent.

William T. Adams, former burgess of Hays, now the Thirty-first Ward, and Harry W. Kinkelvoss, a former councilman, have indorsed Herron, as has LaLaga Calabrese.

YOUTH REMAINS 1ST ON BALLOT

The Republican primary ballot will carry in the coveted first position for Mayor the name of James J. Kavanaugh, 23-year-old Duquesne University student. This was assured today when no formal attack on his candidacy was made yesterday, the last opportunity for filing complaints.

An attache of Mayor John S. Herron's office referred to a provision of the city charter that no person under 25 could hold the office of Mayor at the time Kavanaugh won the No. 1 position.

Today is the final day for candidates to withdraw from the election race, but up to noon none of the principals had done so.

PINCHOT FAVORS MACADAM ROAD

HARRISBURG, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot has indicated that new type macadam surfaces may be used extensively in Pennsylvania's $18,891,000 federal aid highway program to get maximum mileage and work relief from the money.

Addressing a four-county delegation which urged concrete for the 17-mile road between Blakeslee and Broadheadsville, Monroe County, the Governor emphasized this fact while promising to give careful consideration to the group's appeal.

He said concrete would cost $36,800 a mile, with 25 per cent of the cost going to labor, while "modern macadam" would cost $30,400, with 45 per cent for labor. In view of the increased mileage and the greater number of jobs afforded by macadam, he said he could see "a distinct advantage in not building the concrete road."

Rain Stops Cavalry Review by Pinchot

CAMP RICKARDS, MT. GRETNA, Pa., Aug. 22.—(INS.)—Thirty-six hours of rainfall which turned the state's military reservation into a sea of mud forced a postponement today in the review of the 103rd Cavalry by their commander-in-chief, Gov. Gifford Pinchot.

In "stormy weather" attire, Gov. Pinchot spent the night in camp. When rain continued to fall today, the review was canceled and the chief executive departed for the state capital.

Mt. Lebanon Official Gets 50 Per Cent Cut

The salary of Mt. Lebanon Township's treasurer was slashed 5 per cent in an ordinance passed last night by the township commissioners, which set the maximum salary of the office at $3,000 a year.

The treasurer, paid on a percentage basis, has been receiving $6,000 a year. Under the new ruling, to be effective with the beginning of the next term of office, the treasurer must also pay all office expenses, except rent.

CURRENCY CHIEF RALLY ORATOR

J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, will address Democrats of Western Pennsylvania, "Roosevelt Day," September 2, in Kennywood Park. Describing O'Connor, David L. Lawrence, Democratic county chairman, said:

Mr. O'Connor

"The currency chief, who first led the fight for Roosevelt in California, is not only one of the ablest financial brains of the administration, but is also among the best orators in Washington."

O'Connor, as comptroller, has not only the direction of gold, silver and greenbacks, but is also in charge of the opening and closing of the country's banks, Lawrence explained. In his hands is the final decree of a bank's ability to carry on, also the licensing of new ones.

More than 50,000 are expected at the gathering. The meeting is planned as a tribute to the President.

RELIEF WORKER FIRED BY LANG

As a result of criticism that employes of the city on unemployment relief projects were loafing, Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang fired Isaac Klein, 5877 Shady-Forbes terrace, he announced today.

Lang called in supervisors of the unemployment projects, and told them that further loafing of the men under their direction would not be tolerated.

Complaints that many of the workmen hired for the temporary work were idling came to Lang, he said. Further dismissals will follow substantiated complaints, he added.

Urges Sliding Scale For Officials' Pay

Ira T. Williams, candidate for Republican nomination for sheriff, today declared legislation should be enacted providing for a sliding scale of official salaries that could be adjusted in times of economic distress in keeping with diminishing tax returns. Under present conditions, he said, with salaries fixed by the Legislature, public officials cannot do their part in bearing the burden depressions.

He advocated a percentage law that would automatically bring a reduction in the salaries of public officials when taxes declined to a stated minimum.

TUBE CITY FOES ASSAIL LYSLE

John Sweeney and Dr. H. S. Arthur, McKeesport mayoralty candidates, rivaled each other on the stump last night, but each attacked Mayor George H. Lysle, the third candidats in the Republican primary.

Sweeney spoke at the Penn-McKee Hotel. Arthur appeared before the Junto Club.

Dr. Arthur said that from 1900 to 1930 property valuations in McKeesport increased three and a half times while the cost of operating the government increased six times and the population only 60 per cent. He charged there had been no sincere attempt to balance the budget or to eliminate unnecessary jobs. Dr. Arthur said that when he was Mayor of McKeesport 20 years ago his administration cut the costs of government $43,000.

Sweeney, assailing both Arthur and Lysle, said the primary battle was between the people and the corporations, and that he was representing the people. He said no effort had been made by the city administration to reduce utility rates, and attacked both opponents for alleged loose methods of public financing.

Sweeney will speak tonight in Moose Temple, McKeesport.

Attorney Seeking Alderman Post

An unusual campaign is being waged in the Twenty-fifth Ward, North Side, by Attorney Julius J. Strba, who seeks the Republican and Democratic nominations for alderman. Strba is making a personal house-to-house call on all the voters in the ward.

Strba is one of the few attorneys in the city seeking the job of alderman. He believes an alderman should be experienced in law. He lives at 221 Henderson street.

Vote Machines To Be Exhibited

Co-operation by civic and social organizations in familiarizing the public with the county's new vote machines has been asked by Maj. W. T. Rees, director of the county election bureau. Upon written requests by such groups, machines and operators will be provided by the bureau for demonstrations starting August 28 and continuing to within a few days of the primaries, Maj. Rees announced today.

Non-Partisan Jurists Piekarski's Theme

The importance of the judiciary being strictly non-partisan and the necessity for voters to bring pressure for legislation for election of judges on a non-partisan ballot will be the topic of Judge Frank A. Piekarski's address to the Republican Council of Women of Wilkinsburg tonight at the Penn-Lincoln Hotel.

Judge Piekarski will discuss the problem of "Bond Issues" at Glenshaw Wednesday night.

Son of Lindsay Sure His Father Will Be Judge

Alexander H. Lindsay is one voter who is sure that his father, Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay, is going to win one of the three seats on the Common Pleas bench this fall. He said so in his maiden campaign speech last night in Mt. Carmel Baptist Church, East Pittsburgh.

Attorney Lindsay, seeking the nomination on the Republican ticket, will speak before a meeting of Republican women in Penn-Lincoln Hotel tonight. K. William Schuman will uphold the Lindsay candidacy before the Third Ward Civic Club, 1230 Locust street, McKeesport, tonight.

WRIT TO ASSESS VOTER OPPOSED

The courts were asked today to set aside a writ obtained by Charles Langenbacher, of 212 Second avenue, directing the county commissioners to show cause why his name should not be placed on the tax lists. When Langenbacher obtained the writ last week he said that he and 10,000 others had been refused assessment on flimsy grounds.

Assistant County Solicitors John H. Lauer and Ralph H. Frank, who presented the answer asserted that Langenbacher's motion had no legal basis.

Langenbacher, said to be acting for a Republican group, was denied assessment on the grounds that he had not established a voting residence.

Candidate Pledges New Deal on Relief

A new deal in the administration of Allegheny County poor relief is demanded by the people, Bernard L. Flynn, independent candidate for Director of the Poor, told the Seventh Ward Progressive League last night in the Penn-McKee Hotel, McKeesport.

The issues in the poor board fight are the same today as they were in 1931, the candidate said, when K. William Schuchman, the late Bert A. Llewellyn and he carried on a fight for the office against two of the present poor directors and the husband of the third, obtaining approximately 40,000 votes on the Square Deal ticket.

Judge Smith Maps Round of Meetings

Judge Ralph H. Smith, candidate for the Common Pleas bench, is to speak before the Council of Republican Women in the Penn-Lincoln Hotel, Wilkinsburg, the Beacon Club, Squirrel Hill, and in Elizabeth High School, tonight.

Tomorrow, Judge Smith will swing through Cheswick, Springdale and Fawn, Frazier, Harmar and Indiana townships. In the evening he will address the Permas Club meeting at Ted Doehla's farm near Mars.

BAUER RETIRES, BACKS HENRY

Frank C. Bauer, Council candidate on the Republican and Democratic tickets, withdrew today and indorsed the candidacy of John M. Henry for the Democratic mayoralty nomination. At the same time Bauer indorsed the Council candidacy of Joseph Stack, running on the same slate with Joseph N. Mackrell, who is seeking the Republican mayoralty nomination.

Bauer said the regulars in both parties "won't carry out the will of the people." Mackrell and Councilman P. J. McArdle, by dividing the Republican fight against Mayor John S. Herron, insure the latter's nomination, Bauer said. To beat the Republican regular with an independent Democrat, Bauer favors Henry, declaring Pittsburgh is weary of the domination by "regulars."

Adolph Edlis, City Treasurer in the first administration of William A. Magee, also indorsed Henry yesterday. Edlis formed the Roosevelt Independent Committee of Allegheny County last fall. He said:

"I am positive in my conviction that in the person of John M. Henry the people of this great industrial city will have a second George W. Guthrie. Pittsburgh can no longer afford the 'old deal' of ruinous taxes, padded payrolls and the smug politician, 'corrupt and contented.'"

John Murphy has withdrawn as a councilmanic candidate with an indorsement of William N. McNair for the Democratic mayoralty nomination, together with his councilmanic slate. A meeting of regulars, at which all candidates will speak, is scheduled for the Belmar School, Belmar and Hermitage streets, tomorrow night.

Mackrell Backers To Hold Meetings

Two meetings will be held tonight to perfect organizations to back the candidacy of Joseph N. Mackrell for Mayor on the Progressive Republican ticket.

A Tenth Ward meeting will be held at 8 o'clock in the Morningside School, Greenwood and Chislett streets. Squire William Scott will preside. Another meeting will be held in the Thirteenth Ward in the Belmar School, Lang and Kedron avenues. A. E. Frazier will preside.

PARTY CHANGE ASKED FOR 200

Attorneys James L. O'Toole and Austin Staley, acting for the Democratic organization, today filed petitions in Common Pleas Court asking that the political affiliation of 200 voters be changed on the assessment books.

They acted in behalf of their own candidacy for judgeships in County Court, as well as for other Democratc candidates.

One petition bore the names of 140 Etna residents, the other those of 60 Wilkinsburg voters. O'Toole said there were 3,000 others interested in the outcome.

The petitioners said they had declared themselves Republicans when the assessors sat July 19, but now desired to be assessed as Democrats. The assessors, they alleged, refused to make the change, except by individual affidavit.

They asked that a mandamus be issued directing the assessors to show cause why the change could not be made on petition of a group of any number.

12,000 ON VOTE LIST CHECKED

His staff of investigators increased to 60, Lee A. Riordan, chief of the County Commissioners' Bureau of Investigation, today began an intensive check of names and affidavits made by more than 12,000 persons during the special assessments of the past month.

Certification to the County Treasurer's office is necessary before these persons can pay their poll tax to vote.

Already more than 1,000 names have been struck from the list, labeled "phantoms," duplications or irregularities, from the Fifth, Eleventh, Sixth and Seventh Wards. September 5 will be the last day for assessment.

Army-Navy G.O.P. Puts Faith in Coyne

The Army and Navy Republican Association was organized last night "to place its trust and confidence in the leadership of Senator James J. Coyne." H. W. Schreiver is president and Chester F. Clark secretary-treasurer.

The association later will open headquarters and indorse candidates. Its announcement says a leader must be recognized and followed, but "we do not look for a superman."

Neeson Addresses Progressive League

A warning against overlooking the importance of the jury commission was given last night by Vincent C. Neeson, Republican candidate for jury commissioner, at a meeting of the Seventh Ward Progressive League in the Penn-McKee Hotel, McKeesport. He said:

"The jury commission in the functions assigned to it is equally important as the judicial positions. A capable jury is the most important factor in our system of jurisprudence."

JUDGES GUESTS AT BEACON CLUB

Judges Benjamin Lencher and Frank Piekarski will be guests of honor tonight at 8:30 at a political rally in the Beacon Club, 5843 Forbes street. Judges Ralph H. Smith and Harry Rowand; Alderman Sol S. Goldstein, of the Fourteenth Ward; Louis Alpern, candidate for Jury Commissioner, and other candidates will attend. The meeting will be open to the public.

Arm-in-arm three Hazelwood children walked from behind a parked car late yesterday into the path of an approaching machine and were seriously injured.

They were Anna Grace, 8, of 4737 Second avenue; her sister, Mary, 6, and Ethel Kirby, 12, of 4816 Second avenue. All were taken to Mercy Hospital. Marx Hartman, 19, of 5213 Second avenue, was the driver, police said.

HINT OWN GUN KILLED GAINES

SPOKANE, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The possibility that Dr. James I. Gaines, well-to-do sportsman and drugless physician, was killed with his own pistol was expressed by detectives today.

Gaines, returning home shortly after 1:30 o'clock last Tuesday morning, was shot as he stepped from his automobile. Mrs. Lily Gaines, his wife, found him dying in the driveway, and told police she was unable to get a statement from him.

Lawrence Albert, ballistics expert, indicated the bullet found in Gaines' body came from his own pistol, which has not been found. Detective Capt. James McCarry yesterday said he expected to make arrests "within 48 hours."

Mrs. Gaines and Mrs. Harriette Andrew, whose apartment Gaines left a few minutes before he was shot, said the sportsman had the gun Sunday. Police Chief Ira Martin said:

"If the Gaines' pistol was the death weapon, the number of possible suspects has been reduced materially."

Tires will cost more

MANUFACTURERS and dealers unanimously predict a substantial increase in the price of automobile tires and all rubber goods. Everything which goes into the manufacture of automobile tires has materially advanced in price. During the past three months, crude rubber has advanced in cost 300%. Cotton, which goes into the carcass of the tire, has doubled in price as have all the other incidental materials. Rubber costs have also increased, all tire companies recently granting their employees substantial increases in pay. Therefore, the present exceptionally low price on tires cannot continue. The smart automobile owner should anticipate his needs and buy now.

HARNESS RACING REVIVAL PLANNED

By his fine exhibition in winning from such a cunning ring general as Vince Dundee at Forbes Field last night, Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, automatically moved himself up to an outstanding position as a claimant of the middleweight championship of the world, a title formerly held by three other Western Pennsylvanians, Frank Klaus, George Chip and the late Harry Greb.

If Dundee, with his impressive record, was the "uncrowned middleweight champion," Yarosz' clean-cut and undisputed triumph over him certainly establishes the latter's place in the ranks of the foremost. Only lack of an opportunity to battle the Brouillards, Thils and one or two others seemingly can keep him from bringing back the world title to these parts.

Congratulations, Teddy!

CUBS' PLAYER BROTHER OF SLAIN BOXER

It is not generally known, but Dolph Camilli, the first baseman bought from Sacramento by the Chicago Cubs to rest up Manager Lefty Grimm, is a brother of Frankie Campbell, the Coast heavyweight, who fought under an assumed name, and died following a bout with Max Baer early in the latter's career.

HERE'S A GOOD RASSLING STORY

Harry Salsinger, Detroit scribe, writes a funny wrestling story about Hans Kampfer, the German. It seems Kampfer was staying at a hotel in Phoenix, Ariz., between engagements when he received a call asking him if he would wrestle a home town pride named Peter Sauer. Sauer was known as the champion of Arizona, but Kampfer had not heard of him and readily consented.

At 6 o'clock on the night of the show, Kampfer was stuffing himself with a man-sized meal in a restaurant when a fellow grappler strolled in and expressed his amazement. Kampfer went on with his eating, undisturbed, saying:

"Ach, dis Sauer, I toss him in one minute. Dis aind't no match. Sauer, phooey!"

The other wrestler showed him a copy of the daily newspaper, in which was a picture of Sauer. He said:

"Here, look at this."

Kampfer looked. He wiped his face on his napkin, and looked again. Then:

"Dot aind't Sauer. Dot's Ray Shteele."
"That's Sauer and Steele, too."

This was a bit too thick for Kampfer, but gradually the plot was unfolded to him. It seemed Steele was a native of Phoenix and his mother insisted upon having him wrestle under his right name when he was at home.

The light dawned, and Kampfer yelled:

"Vaider, vaider! No more foods. Aldreaddy I got a sufficiency yet."

Sauer won the match, and now Kampfer asks questions before he consents to take on "unknowns." And if he eats at all before a bout he does so sparingly.

SCRIBES ON CAREY, AND VICE VERSA

It seems the scribes have been second-guessing Max, and Max in turn has been second-guessing them, and, as a result, there are reports that he will be out on his ear and will be succeeded by Gabby Street, Burleigh Grimes or some other worthy next season.

"In the fourth paragraph of your Monday story—"
"You fellows and your typewriters—"
"You've got the fans on me. Every move—"

"Butthelliofitistheyaintwinning."

MRS. MOODY SLIPPING AS YEARS TAKE TOLL

There no longer can be any doubt of the fact that Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, long the reigning queen of tennis, is nearing the end of her sweep of the courts. Her tough tussle with Dorothy Round at Wimbledon, the ailment that kept her out of the Wightman Cup matches and her close call against Betty Nuthall in the National semi finals are unmistakable signs that time is taking its toll and she no longer finds the strain of hard and prolonged tournament play a romp. She has lasted far

SALBANO BEATS RANDALL IN CLOSE BOUT

By JAMES MILLER

It's only natural that all the glory, big dough and the hurrahs went to Teddy Yarosz, who handed Vince Dundee, widely acclaimed as the uncrowned middleweight champion, a two-fisted beating, but let's not forget the preliminary boys, who helped work up the large crowd to fighting pitch last night at Forbes Field.

In the final bout, Al Salbano, 153¼, who came here billed from Terre Haute, Ind., but who was announced as being from Syracuse, N. Y., dropped Tiger Joe Randall, Negro, 150¾, of Elizabeth, for a nine count with a left hook to the jaw in the second round and came on to win the unanimous decision at the end of five heats. It was a close bout, but Salbano's digging hooks in the last frame clinched the verdict for him.

ROSS BEATS DIAMOND

Phil Ross, formerly of Chicago and now of this city, weighing 154¾ pounds, won a hard-fought referee's decision from Al Diamond, stablemate of Dundee, in the first bout put on after the big attraction. Diamond tipped the beam at 154¼. Ross employed a sweeping left hook to the head to good advantage throughout the fracas. Fred Lux voted for Diamond, Phil Scello for Ross and the referee, Jack Henderson, also cast his ballot Ross' way.

Joey Bazzone, a tough hombre, of McKeesport, 147¼, after being on the canvas for a one count in the opening setto, came back strongly, totally disregarded the fact that Al Lewis, of Washington, Pa., was the intercollegiate welterweight champion while attending Penn State in '32, and outpunched the tincanning Lewis to win. In the third round, Bazzone had Lewis badly hurt and holding on from several hard left hooks to the midsection.

Eddie Zivic, of Lawrenceville, got off to an early lead over Harry Weekly, of Alliance, O., only to get tired in the last two rounds and darn near lose the scrap. It was Zivic's aggressiveness, aided by a three-count knockdown when he belted Weekly with a sharp right in the first round, that enabled him to pull through with a win. Weekly was bleeding from the nose, mouth and left eye at the end of the bout. Weekly weighed 129¾, and Zivic 131¾.

BECKER, RISKE DRAW

Al Becker, of Sheraden, has a grouch on today, and he has a reason. In the opening four-rounder Becker really defeated Johnny Riske, of the South Hills, but the official announcement was a draw.

Becker floored Riske for an eight count in the last round and had him badly hurt, along with being the aggressor in the other rounds, but the judges, Mike Moran and L. K. Meininger, split their vote, and the referee, Joe Orsini, called the affair a draw. Becker weighed 156¾, and Riske 159.

Gate $21,308.10, Boxers Draw $4,600 Each

Ted Yarosz and Vince Dundee each received $4,600.61 for their battle at Forbes Field last night.

Although the crowd appeared to be larger, it was announced today that the paid attendance was 14,446 with several hundred passes and employes helping to swell the total.

The gross receipts, including the federal tax of 10 per cent, were $21,308.10 and the net $19,075.80. The State Athletic Commision received $964.55 for its "cut". The main bout fighters received 25 per cent of the net minus the commission tax.

Fans Page Yellow Horse To Make Show Official

By JESS CARVER

Yep, the fight was official. Pittsburgh's own wise crack, the bon mot peculiar to the metropolis, was sounded. The cry which, for a decade, has rung across local diamonds, football fields, basketball course, prize rings at indoor fights, good fights, bad fights and private fights was heard . . . the old battle cry of—

"Put Yellow Horse in!"

It was a good natured, colorful, orderly and peppery crowd that sat in on Teddy Yarosz' sparkling victory over Vince Dundee last night at Forbes Field. It was a crowd that came early, remained late and a crowd that was 90 per cent Yarosz.

To list the celebrities observed in the stands and at the ringside would take hours and hours and page after page. Among those present were Pat O'Malley, Dr. L. G. Beinhauer, Dr. Cliff Carlson, the Kelly boys, Benny and Harry Schwartz, Ben Pope (with a $9.85 coat of tan), Harry Neaman, Dr. Louis Weiss, Jimmy Murray, Bill Kern, Bill Croasmuen and genial Jack Lips.

On the North side of the ring sat the party of Lieut. and Mrs. Frank Ferris. In it were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Good, Goose Goslin, Armin Friedman, Louis Conley, Chris McCormick, Frank Wehner, Congressman Michael Muldowney, George Jaffe and Art Rooney.

The scene in the ring prior to the main bout resembled a lawn party more than a ring show. Yarosz' manager and handlers were attired in the nattiest of white flannels and sweaters.

Manager Max Waxman, Dundee's pilot, and the Dundee handlers were garbed in light raiment also; in fact, the rival camps made the celebrated lilies of the field look like so much burned toast.

The gloves for the main event were lugged into the ring by Chief of Detectives George Murren, who came near taking a header as he tripped over the bottom rope.

Both Vince and Teddy received rousing ovations as they left the ring, but to Teddy went the lion's share of the acclaim. It took a squad of Pittsburgh's finest to get him to his dressing room.

William (Fuzzy) Pfarr, the Heywood Broun of Pittsburgh reporters, was as crushed as his Bond street, salmon-tan (new color) hat over having to pay Promoter John Hernon a bet made on the size of the crowd. William P. spent most of the evening checking up on the official count.

The sartorially correct John McGarvey and Prof. Peter J. (Bunny) Buntach were prominent among the local sportsmen in attendance. Mr. McGarvey's ensemble was a brown as a morning-after taste.

Promoter John Hernon was congratulated roundly by friends and well-wishers at the ringside just before the main bout on the success of the affair. The press arrangements were excellent; the crowd was well handled by the ushers and police, and the hot dogs were hot and the pop was cold.

One of the best cracks of the evening was passed by a fan following the Zivic-Weekly bout, the decision of which displeased some of the customers. Addressing himself to the judges, Mike Moran and Lou Meininger, one ring bug jeered:

TED CARRIES SEVEN OF 10 ROUNDS

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor

Pittsburgh today was recovering from the thrill of its fistic Best Seller last night at Forbes Field at which a crowd of approximately 15,000 paid gross receipts in excess of $21,000 to see Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, boost his stock as a middleweight title claimant by winning handily over the experienced and highly-touted Vince Dundee, of Newark, N. J.

It was the biggest turnout of fans for any boxing show ever staged in Pittsburgh, and a good-natured and enthusiastic one, and at the finish there was not a single dissenting vote as Yarosz was awarded the unanimous decision of the three local officials named at the last minute to handle the battle. Red Robinson was the referee and Al Grayber and Frank Brown served as judges. All are veterans and they clicked in fine style.

GETS OVATION AT FINISH

The ovation that greeted the introduction of Yarosz before the fight was as nothing compared with the acclaim that rolled down out of the packed upper and lower decks of the grandstand and across the field seats at the finish. The bashful, good-looking Polish youth was the conquering hero beyond a doubt, and only the fact that his wavy hair is jet black kept him from being the true fair-haired boy of that assembled multitude of fans.

Following the bout, Ray Foutts, Yarosz' manager, said:

"Teddy was declared the middleweight champion of Pennsylvania by the announcer when the fight was over. I want to go on record as saying I am claiming the middleweight championship of the world for him and will continue to claim it until I get Lou Brouillard or Marcel Thil or some of those trick champions into the ring with Teddy. I'll bet a Brouillard fight within a few months will draw another half time as many fans as this fight tonight did, and Teddy will beat Brouillard just as sure as there are seven days in a week."

FIGHT ACID TEST FOR TED

Max Waxman, Dundee's manager, said:

"I'm satisfied. Vince lost. He didn't look good. We'd like to get Yarosz again, for 15 rounds. Vince was just coming at the finish tonight . . . Say, and the tough thing about it is that I never bet so much money on a fighter as I did on Vince tonight. I thought he was a sure thing."

So far as the fans were concerned, this was the acid test for Yarosz. Despite his record of only one defeat in his professional career of 70 fights, there still were a few doubting Thomases who thought he couldn't stand up when sent against the topnotchers. His display of last night silenced the last of these skeptics—or should have done so.

All Teddy did was to win seven of the first eight rounds and then coast in the last two, which Dundee won with a hard pull from behind trying to overcome that big early lead of his opponent. It hardly could have been any more decisive short of a knockout or a flock of knockdowns.

HIGH SPOT IN BATTLE

There were no floorings in the bout and neither man was marked at the finish. The left side of Yarosz's nose appeared to have suffered an abrasion at one stage but it wasn't apparent at the final bell. Yet it was a tough, hammer-and-tongs affair all of the way, fought at a very fast clip for middleweights, with Yarosz the

Round-by-Round Story of Yarosz' Victory

Yarosz was first in the ring, at 9:55 p. m., accompanied by his manager, Ray Foutts, and the latter's brother, Byron Foutts, and Mike Ray, as seconds. He wore a dark bathrobe with red trimmings. Dundee followed a minute later from the opposite corner, wearing a checkered robe. His manager, Max Waxman; his trainer, Benny Benjamin, and Jim O'Grady were his seconds.

Yarosz came half way across the ring to shake hands with Dundee. A wait ensued until George Murren, chief of county detectives, appeared in the ring with the gloves for the bout, which had been entrusted to his care.

Red Robinson was introduced as the referee, and Al Grayber and Frank Brown were named as the judges for the fight.

Just before the introductions were made, at 10:02 p. m., Ed Yarosz, brother of Teddy, climbed up into the latter's corner and shook hands with him and wished him luck. The bell rang for the first round at 10:03, after Manager Waxman and Referee Robinson had discussed some technical points following the instructions.

ROUND ONE

Dundee moved to the left neutral corner as he came out to fight. Yarosz was wild with a left and they clinched. Yarosz jabbed twice and blocked a right uppercut by Dundee. Dundee blocked two lefts and was wild with a right swing, a clinch following. Yarosz backed Vince into a neutral corner and they clinched again. Dundee missed a right and Yarosz was short with a left to the head and backed Dundee to the ropes, where they clinched again. Yarosz jabbed twice and Dundee missed a left and Yarosz kept peppering away with his jab. Teddy ducked under a right to the head and they clinched. Yarosz was circling about and Dundee was doing most of his maneuvering with the upper part of his body. Yarosz staged a furious rally in which he scored, with Dundee wild in his attempts to return the fire. Yarosz stuck in a left to the head at the bell, which found the crowd cheering. Yarosz' round.

ROUND TWO

They rushed to the center of the ring and Yarosz sent two lefts to the head, took a right swing to the jaw and then backed to the ropes under a left to the head. Both were short with lefts and then Dundee missed another right swing. Dundee sent home a left hook to the head and they mixed. Yarosz shot in several lefts and then clinched and wrestled Dundee to the ropes near Yarosz' corner. Dundee missed two left hooks, but scored with an overhand right to the jaw that followed. He also sent a right to the jaw. Yarosz electrified the crowd by forcing Dundee to the ropes and pinning him there without actually holding him for a solid minute until the referee parted them. Teddy to the body with rights and to the head with his left while Dundee tried to block and slip the punches. Dundee seemed hurt, but at the bell he waved his hands and walked calmly to his corner, showing no signs of distress. Yarosz' round.

ROUND THREE

Dundee came tearing out of his corner and they went to close quarters. He rushed again, sending a right to the body. He brought up an uppercut to the head. He was fighting out of a weave, and doing his best work so far, while Yarosz appeared to be tired from his exertions at the end of the previous round. Dundee planted another right to the body. He ripped up an uppercut as Yarosz came close. Dundee added two lefts to the head and a right to the body with Yarosz on the ropes. Dundee was wild with a right and they clinched. Dundee sent left and right to the body. He looped his right over Yarosz' left to the head. He added a right to the body. Yarosz was pawing with his left trying to keep off Dundee. Vince rained another right to the body. Yarosz landed a light right to the head. Dundee scored with a left to the head and was still moving in, weaving and bobbing as the round ended. Dundee's round.

ROUND FOUR

Both rushed out to mixing and Dundee rank his right solidly to the body as they meet. Dundee outscored Teddy in a mixing bee. Dundee outscored Teddy in a mixing bee. Dundee outscored Teddy in a mixing lowed with a left. They traded jabs. Yarosz sent a good right to the jaw and Dundee put a right to the body and they clinched. Yarosz jabbed and they clinched again. Yarosz darted in suddenly with a clean right smash to the jaw and forced Dundee to the ropes in the latter's corner, where he bombarded him with both fists. Dundee winced and claimed one of the blows was low, but the referee did not recognize it. Yarosz kept up the drumfire until Dundee finally fought his way off the ropes and they stood and slugged toe to toe in mirdring. Dundee scored with an uppercut and Yarosz hooked his left to the head. Both were punching hard and the fighting wax terrific. Yarosz polished off the round with rights to the head and body. Yarosz' round.

ROUND FIVE

Yarosz sent a right to the body as they met. In close Dundee pounded the body. Both sent a right to the body and they clinched. Yarosz jabbed and then blocked a right to the body. Dundee missed a right swing to the head and went off balance and Yarosz also missed his counter. They mixed. Dundee sent a hard right to the body, but Yarosz came back with an uppercut and then crossed a right to the head. He outfought Dundee and forced the later to the ropes. As Yarosz rushed again, he ran into an uppercut to the body. Ted sent a left and Vince a right to the body. Yarosz again forced his foe to the ropes and scored cleanly with both fists. Ted's left went to the body at the gong. Yorosz' round.

ROUND SIX

Both rushed to midring and then they sparred. Teddy cocked his right and sent it flush to the jaw. He forced Dundee to the ropes. Dundee rallied with two rights to the body. Then they traded jabs. Dundee missed a jumping right to the head, but sent two rights to the body at close quarters. They traded lefts, and, in a terrific slugging exchange that followed, Dundee was forced to the ropes, but he came back swinging rights. He scored one to the body, then was wild with both left and right to the body. Yarosz again forced Dundee into the latter's corner, and Vince leaped into the path of a right to the head. They were in Yarosz' corner with Dundee trying his ducking and slipping act as the round ended. Yarosz' round.

ROUND SEVEN

ROUND EIGHT

Yarosz rushed out of his corner with a vengeance, but quickly sidestepped as Dundee blocked his path. They traded rights to the jaw. Dundee protested a backhand punch. Yarosz sent a right and then a series of left jabs to the jaw. Dundee going back off balance. Yarosz again sent a right to the head. Dundee was taking the punishing with his head down, stalking the fast-moving Yarosz, trying to get to close quarters. He finally sank a hard right to the body and Teddy appeared to be hurt. He followed with two more and Yarosz pulled away along the ropes. He came back with a good left to the body. They traded rights to the body. Dundee covered in a clinch. Teddy sent a right to the head and they exchanged blows. The crowd was roaring as they ended the round with a session of midring mixing. Yarosz' round.

ROUND NINE

"Throw everything!" was the injunction given Dundee by the men in his corner as he went out for the ninth round. He started off with lefts to the body and head, and followed with another left. They exchanged lefts, Dundee was short with a right, but landed another left and they clinched. He blocked a left by Yarosz. He blocked another left. Dundee was short with a right to the head and took a clean right to the jaw. Dundee was stalking Ted again and sent a left to the head and a right to the body. Yarosz tied him up in a clinch and landed both right and left on the break. Dundee was infuriated and came lashing across the ring after him, talking to him. He sent two rights and a left to the head. Teddy came back with right and left to the body and Dundee rammed his right to the body. Dundee sent another right to the body and in close planted a right to the head and missed another. Dundee's round.

ROUND TEN

They shook hands for the final round and then circled about and sparred. Dundee crunched his left to the body. He followed with two rights to the body. He sent three lefts to the face and a right to the jaw, with Yarosz moving away, protecting his lead. They traded and Dundee brought up a short right uppercut. Both were short with swings. Yarosz scored with a right to the body and forced Dundee to the ropes, but Vince came off with a left to the body. Each landed a right and they were clinched on the ropes at the final bell. Dundee's round, but Yarosz' fight.

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—Win, lose or draw, George Gibson's Pirates have decided to play out their string. The way the roads are now, it behooves any of the four clubs involved in the second-place fight in the National League to be ready to grasp any opportunity which might develop in the event of a crackup of Bill Terry's Giants, who, many believe, are playing beyond their inherent skill.

Anyhow, the Pirates today, winding up their season's play in Boston, looked into the immediate future and decided to make the best of things. They visualized the morrow when they will take on the league leaders in a double-header, which will inaugurate a five-game series.

GIANTS FACE TEST

Certainly there will be excitement at the Polo Grounds a-plenty beginning with tomorrow and continuing for 10 days. As quickly as the Giants wind up their important business with the Pirates they must take on the Cardinals in five battles, and Manager Frank Frisch is out with a statement to the effect that the flag race is not over yet by any means.

Frisch points out that his club still has eight games to play with the Giants, counting three contests the Terrymen must stage in St. Louis. It is true that the New Yorkers have a hard schedule ahead, but their performances against the Cubs in their present series would indicate that the Polo Grounders are plenty tough.

Nevertheless, the Pirates will leave no stones unturned to get to the top. They would be a bit foolish to lag when it is considered that second place and second money are more to be desired that the cash and honor that attend the other first-di[illegible]ths.

BIRKOFER REPORTS

To date on the present invasion, the Pirates have been unimpressive. They won one and lost one in Brooklyn and then dropped three in a row here.

The Buccos were cheered yesterday by the arrival in camp of Pitcher Ralph Birkofer, the powerful southpaw who has been doing excellent farm duty for Dan Howley at Toronto.

Birkofer reported to Manager Gibson in fine fettle and it is likely he will see some mound action in the next few days.

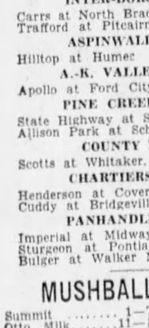
DUDICK IN HERO ROLE

F. Dudick, pitching for the Mayview nine, carved a notch for himself in baseball's hall of game when he hurled a no-hit, no-run classic against the Mellon Stuart team at Mayview last evening. He also connected for a triple which drove in the only three runs scored by his club, and recorded 11 strikeouts.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22.—I see the rumor mongers have joined the NRA and are getting out a maximum of 40 rumors a week.



Nick Altrock

And one of the red-hot test-tid-bits is that Babe Ruth will manage the Chicago White Sox next year. That comes under the classification of "Oh, yeah?"

Personally, I can't see that proposition with the Lick Observatory telescope. Folks will pay dough to see the Babe bash home runs over the ramparts, but they aren't going to storm the turnstiles to see him wigwagging signals and chawing a cud of gum on the bench.

On the other hand, assuming Babe was a playing manager, I'd like to know how he's going to run a team unless he has a telephone out in right field. I'd like to guess Babe will tend to his regular knitting for a few years longer—and he won't be crocheting himself a pair of white sox to wear in Chicago, either.

'Easy Fight'—Yarosz; 'Off Form'—Dundee

By TED YAROSZ,
Winner Over Vince Dundee in Middleweight Elimination Bout at Forbes Field Last Night.

The fight was easier than I expected to find it. It was not as hard as the battle Tommy Freeman gave me at Hickey Park a few months ago. I was never hurt badly, and I wound up coasting in under my big early lead. I wanted to fight it out to the finish, but my manager, Ray Foutts, told me I would be foolish to take any chances with my opponent desperately trying to come from behind.

Ted Yarosz

I feel flattered that so many people should turn out to see me fight in what next to Monaca is my home town. They tell me this was a record crowd for Pittsburgh, and they've had some great fighters. I only hope I pleased the fans with my work and will fulfill any hopes they may have for my future success.

WANTS BROUILLARD NEXT

I'd like to fight Lou Brouillard next. He's one of the claimants of the middleweight championship of the world. Dundee also was a claimant. I think I have proved I belong up there with those other claimants.

I knew I had the fight won when I pinned Dundee on the ropes at the end of the second round and kept punching away with my right to the body and left to the head. He was weaving and bobbing and trying to block and pull away from punches, and at the end of the siege he waved his hands and walked nonchalantly to his corner and seemed unhurt, but I know I hurt him not once, but several times.

I saw him do the same thing when he boxed Frankie Goosby and Goosby fought himself out thinking he had him in trouble. But Goosby was shooting punches to the head only and missing. I had coached myself for such a spot and I knew I wasn't going to keep missing him, because I decided to punch with everything I had in my right hand to the body and take pot luck on catching him with the left to the head.

HURT ONLY ONCE

The only time I was even near being in danger was in the eighth round, when he hit me hard in the body and I pulled away along the ropes. But I came back with a hard punch of my own and he didn't get a chance to follow up the opportunity.

Dundee complained about a low blow when I had him on the ropes in the fourth round. It may have been low, and I will give him the benefit of the doubt. In fact, when I saw him wince I apologized. But the punch was thrown in hard fighting and with no intent to foul. In the ninth round I accidentally hit Vince on the break, and he got sore and snarled as he rushed after me. He started to talk, but I paid no attention to him. I remember one of the things he said was:

"Come on and do it again."

Bring on Brouillard next. And I wouldn't mind another crowd like the one of last night.

By VINCE DUNDEE
Loser to Ted Yarosz in Forbes Field Bout Last Night

Well, I lost. What is there to say?

Anything I may say I know will be held against me. Yarosz beat me. It would be foolish for me to quibble about the decision. But I'd like to fight him again, preferably for 15 rounds.

Vince Dundee

I'm sore. Sore at myself. I realize I must have looked like a chump in there. I fought like a tramp. It was the worst off-night I've ever experienced. No, I'm not trying to take away any credit from Yarosz when I say that. I know I just simply couldn't do anything I tried. I was missing swings all night.

ANALYZES TED'S STYLE

This may sound funny, too. Although Yarosz beat me and has beaten a lot of other men who are well rated, I don't think he's a great fighter. A good one, yes. But he doesn't hit hard and I think it's his peculiar style that wins for him. He's awkward to fight. You have to be in there with him to know just how tough he is to solve.

I think I was getting to him in the closing rounds, and that's why I say I'd like to fight him again, and the longer the route the better I'll like it. Meanwhile, my congratulations to Teddy. I hope he goes on to win the middleweight championship if I don't grab it myself.

WOMEN STARS TIE IN PLAY AT OAKMONT

By TOM BIRKS

Mrs. L. G. Riley, of Edgewood, paired with Mrs. J. A. Masury, of South Hills, and Mrs. H. A. Brandon, of Butler, teamed with Mrs. J. N. Kelly, of the Field Club, led a large field of women golfers home with net 79's in the two-ball, best-ball tourney held by the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania over the links of the Oakmont Country Club yesterday.

It was one of those handicap tournaments, and many of the well-balanced star teams finished fell down the list.

Mrs. C. I. Wendt and Mary Kuhn, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, shot a net 80 to finish one stroke behind the leaders, while Mrs. J. A. Allen, of the Field Club, and Miss Katherine McCloskey, of Longue Vue, finished with an 81, as did Mrs. L. H. Gillette and Mrs. R. K. McConnell, St. Clair combination.

Highland came to the fore in the second division when Miss Ted Davies and Dr. Edna Beale finished with a net 78. Mrs. C. C. Briggs and Mrs. J. Baird, of St. Clair, were second with 79. Mrs. E. W. Courtney and Mrs. A. S. Pruett, of the Shannopin Country Club, led home the third division with a best ball of 75.

The Pennsylvania Golf Association holds its final one-day handicap tourney of the season at the Fox Chapel Golf Club tomorrow, and at the Alcoma Country Club, Syria Temple holds its third annual tournament with a number of events on the card.

STANTON HEIGHTS NET TOURNEY ON TODAY

STARS ADVANCE IN PLAY FOR PARKS TITLE

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Eighteen local racqueters, most of them of outstanding net note in the district, square off in the second annual Stanton Heights Golf Club invitation tennis tourney, beginning on the North Aiken lot late this afternoon.

Despite absence of Dr. John and Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, who will meet the Cleveland stars, Kirk Reid and LeRoy Weir, at Madison Lakelands on Saturday and of such redoubtables as Charley Lockhart, Sam Harbison, and Paul Barber, fast competition is assured with a seeded group that lists Western Maryland Champion Frank Broida, George Henderson, Frank Smith and Billy O'Loughlin in the order named.

DOUBLES NEXT MONTH

The Stanton affair will be confined to men's singles this week, with men's doubles following on dates to be selected next month. The pairings:

Second round, upper half—George D. Henderson, Stanton Heights, vs. W. McCook Reed, Edgewood; V. K. Glidden, Stanton Heights, vs. Thomas A. Robinson, Fox Chapel; William L. O'Loughlin, P. A. A., vs. W. Russell Unger, Stanton Heights; Leonard W. Reed, University Club, vs. winner of Bovard-McClintock match.

The ranks of the favorites remained unbroken as the masculine racqueters, who swung into action yesterday, continued to reel off first round duels today. Today's summary:

MEN'S SINGLES

First round—Ted Rosenthal defeated Jack Punney, 6-0, 6-0; William Fay defeated John Campbell, 6-0, 6-1; James Criswell defeated Jim Gaughler, 6-3, 10-8; Robert Bald defeated Milton Diethorn, 6-4, 7-5; Edwin Beachler defeated Hugh Donnelly, 6-4, 8-6; Jim Clark defeated Charles Smith, 6-2, 6-3; C. Jones defeated Joseph Creighton, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4; Phil Thomas defeated Bob McPeek, 6-3, 6-4.

WOMEN'S SINGLES

First round—Marion Klein defeated Bina Donnelly, 6-0, 6-2; Helen Kauffield defeated Florence E. McDonald, 6-0, 6-0; Margaret Esser defeated Winnona Holmes, 6-4, 8-4; Darleane Lane defeated Kathelene Thomas, 6-4, 6-2.

Dave McDonald Seals' Speaker

Dave G. McDonald, veteran local harness racing man, will be the guest speaker of the Trained Seals of the Sports Department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph over WCAE at 7 o'clock tomorrow night, when he will appear in an interview with Harry Keck, sports editor. They will discuss the Allegheny County fair program, the Hambletonian Stake and various other topics of interest to lovers of the light harness sport.

Between Rounds

Johnny Chiodo, who boxes Johnny Hinds in the main bout of Primo Carnera's exhibition show at Johnstown tonight, also meets Charley Burns at Johnstown on August 31.

Eddie Simms and Joe Doktor box the main bout on the Carnera card at Youngstown tomorrow night. Tug Phillips and Jackie Davis are in the semifinal.

Matchmaker Charley Jones expects to complete his card today for the Carnera exhibition in the North Side Stadium Thursday night.

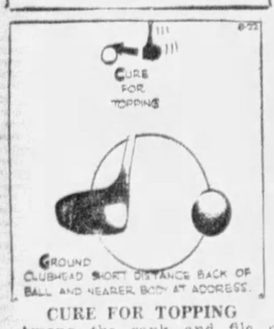
Benny Bass, who boxed Jack Portney at Atlantic City last night, meets Stumpy Jacobs at Virginia Beach, Va. tomorrow night and Battling Shaw at Houston, Tex., on Labor Day.

Mose Butch, local featherweight, tangles with Georgie Annarino in a 10-round bout for the Police Widows' Fund in Youngstown, September 6, and also is booked for a bout in Detroit on September 11.

GRAPHIC GOLF



CURE FOR TOPPING

Among the rank and file of golfers the matter of topping the ball seems to be a prevalent error. On occasions it is caused by the player moving the center of the swing as he shifts his weight to the right foot in what he regards as the proper weight transference in the golf swing. Thus, on the downstroke, the low point of the arc takes place before the ball is met, and the swing, coming too abruptly upward, hits the ball only a glancing blow. On the other hand, the ball may be hit on the downswing before the low point of the arc has been reached, in this way contacting the ball at the top and sending it a few feet ahead. To overcome this fault it often helps to ground the clubhead a short distance back of the ball and in toward the body at address, and, the clubhead descending, will reach its lowest point at the position the ball rests in. Grounded back of the sphere in this way will force the player to hit from the inside out.

WITH MANAGER RAY FOUTTS IN DRESSING ROOM ARTER BEATING DUNDEE

The red letter occasion in Pittsburgh's boxing history came and went at Forbes Field last night when Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, decisively defeated Vince Dundee, world middleweight title claimant, in their 10-round battle before a mammoth crowd to enhance his own championship aspirations considerably. These are Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

YAROSZ VICTOR OVER DUNDEE

The high spot of the fight occurred in the second round, when Yarosz rushed Dundee to the ropes in a neutral corner and kept him there for fully a minute until the bell, blazing away with rights to the body and lefts to the head, with Dundee almost entirely on the defensive, slipping and ducking what punches he could and standing up under the others.

At first it appeared as if Dundee was trying to trap Yarosz, to let the youngster fight himself out, but, as the seconds rolled on and they did not change positions and the referee made no move to break them away from the ropes, it was apparent that Yarosz was hurting his man. Just before the bell Dundee seemed to be out on his feet, but when the gong sounded he waved to the crowd and walked at a steady gait to his corner.

ACTION ALL THE WAY

The flurry cost Yarosz a lot in wind and strength and Dundee managed to go out and win the next round from him, but thereafter until the ninth and tenth it was all Yarosz. The rope incident was repeated on a lesser scale many, many times, with Yarosz capitalizing on it instead of being victimized, as have been many of Dundee's other opponents.

In the main, Yarosz fought a circling fight, stabbing with his left and hitting solidly to the head and body with his right. Dundee was slower of foot, but did a lot of weaving and bobbing and even jumping, but his timing against the moving target was atrocious, and he frequently went off balance as he tried to land overhand swings to the head. He did his best work at close quarters with rights to the body.

'SMART MONEY' LOSES

Yarosz weighed 157 pounds and Dundee 158 at 3 p. m. The odds, which had favored Dundee at 10 to 9 for several days before the fight, went to 10 to 8 just before ringtime, so that the smart money bettors took a licking.

Other details of Pittsburgh's "Battle of the Century" appear in the fight-by-rounds story and the statements of the fighters elsewhere in the sports section.

YANKEES DRAW WITH SOX IN RECORD FRAY

Associated Press.

All but hopelessly outdistanced in the pennant race, the New York Yankees still hang on to their knack for setting up new records of one description or another.

This time, though, it's only a new seasonal endurance mark for the American League which they established with the help of the Chicago White Sox yesterday in an 18-inning battle that wound up in a 3-3 tie and left the Yankees still eight and a half games behind the idle Washington Senators.

DARKNESS HALTS DUEL

Darkness finally broke up a duel which the Yankees twice apparently had won—first in the ninth and again in the eleventh. Through eight innings, Charley Devens, of Harvard fame, and Milt Gaston pitched scoreless ball, and when the Yankees pushed over a run with a three-hit attack in the ninth it seemed to be all over. Devens had allowed only two hits, but Al Simmons started the ninth with a single, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on a long fly by Kress off Herb Pennock, who had relieved Devens a minute or two earlier.

In the eleventh, the Yanks scored twice on hits by Dixie Walker and Ben Chapman, a pass and an infield out, but the Sox came back again to tie the score when Evar Swanson singled with the bases filled. After that it was a scoreless duel between two of the league's oldest twirlers—Pennock and Red Faber, who relieved Gaston at the start of the twelfth.

The 18-inning tussle equaled the season's major league high mark set up by the New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals of the National League on July 2 and eclipsed the 17-inning game the White Sox played with Detroit's Tigers August 13.

INDIANS WIN

Detroit's pitching staff collapsed in the only other American League game of the day and the Tigers dropped a 12-7 decision to the Philadelphia Athletics. Three Tiger hurlers gave up 17 hits and walked 10 men.

LIGHTNER WINS SHOOT TITLE

VANDALIA, O., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Displaying the same steady shooting he showed yesterday, Frank Lightner, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., today won the amateur double target championship of North America with a score of 187 out of a possible 200.

Lightner completed the first 100 yesterday in second place with 94. He had 93 today.

John Taylor, of Newark, O., annexed the professional double title of North America with 187. Yesterday Taylor also finished second in the first half with 95.

Second place in the amateur went to Ted Renfro, of Dell, Mont., with 186. Renfro came from nowhere to take second place. Yesterday he broke only 91 and was considered out of the race, but shattered 95 today. Harke Arie, of Champaign, Ill., was third with 184, and Frank Troeh, of Portland, Ore., was fourth with 181.

Mrs. Walter P. Andrews, of Atlanta, Ga., won the women's double championship of North America by breaking 87 out of a possible 100 targets.

Doubles Tourney Postponement Looms

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 22.—(AP.)—The crack field assembled at Longwood for the national doubles tennis tournament, already held back a day by rain, was warned today that another heavy storm has swept up the coast and that a second postponement of their opening play may result.

Tournament officials, however, were not alarmed by the unfavorable predictions. If the competition cannot be ended this week, it can run over until next week without conflicting with any other tennis picture.

MONTREAL—(AP.)—Benny Tate, hard-hitting catcher for the Montreal Royals, is through with baseball for the rest of the season. The club paid him off after an examination of a hand injury had revealed a broken bone in his finger.

RENTON, Wash.—(AP.)—Deferred because Winooka, Australian mile champion, was stricken during the recent coughing epidemic, the match race against Onrush, crack gelding from the Pasadena Stable, was set definitely today for September 10. The two will race for a $5,000 purse, winner take all.

BALTIMORE—(AP.)—Fritz Maisel, former manager of the Baltimore Orioles, revealed he had been offered a contract by Joe Cambria to manage the Albany club in the International League next year, but declared he had not signed. He said another offer, of which he withheld details, caused him to delay making a final decision on the Albany offer, although he and Cambria, owner of the Senators, had discussed its terms some time ago.

SUMMIT, N. J.—(AP.)—Jimmy Turnesa, of Briar Hills, second youngest member of the noted golfing family, won the Metropolitan caddy master championship at the Canoe Brook Country Club yesterday with a score of 75-81—156.

PHILADELPHIA—(INS.)—Toasted, praised and dined, Denny Shute, pro at the Llanerch Country Club, today basked in the glory that befell him by virtue of winning the British open golf tournament. Welcomed home by Mayor J. Hampton Moore, Denny was accorded a huge celebration and dinner at the Llanerch Country Club last night.

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—(AP.)—R. C. (Red) Maddox, former University of Georgia guard, who had agreed to play this year with the Charlotte Bantams, professional football team, advised officials of the club today he had signed a contract with the Portsmouth (O.) Spartans, of the National Professional Football League.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Dr. Mach, a 2-year-old pacer, won both heats, the second in 2:14, to capture the Illinois Breeders' Futurity, feature event of the Grand Circuit inaugural at the Illinois State Fair here yesterday.

HARNESS RACING MAY ELIMINATE HEATS

A movement is under foot to popularize harness racing by eliminating the heat plan of deciding the competitions. Following the Hambletonian Stake at Goshen, N. Y., recently a group of wealthy patrons of the sport took up the matter of putting their pastime on a par with running races and it was agreed that this might be accomplished by eliminating the heats and making each trip around the track a race and thus giving the fans a fast run for their money.

Another contemplated move is that of shortening up the Grand Circuit and limiting its operations to five or six tracks, each of which will offer a two weeks' stand with betting. The tentative revised Grand Circuit would include Rockingham, N. H., Lexington, Ky., Toledo, Cleveland and Goshen.

PATSY PERRONI MAKES GOOD IN NEW YORK

The success of Patsy Perroni, Canton, (O.), heavyweight boxer, well known to the local fans a few years ago, in his New York debut against Isadoro Gastanaga, whom he easily defeated in 10 rounds in Madison Square Garden, is not surprising. This was Patsy's twenty-first successive victory, one of which was over Johnny Risko. He also boasts a draw with Maxie Rosenbloom, the light-heavyweight champion. He is only 21 years old and is being primed for bouts with Don McCorkindale and Jack Sharkey.

Patsy was born Pasqualia Pavona, in New York, but left the big town when he was 8 years old and from the time he was 14 began to haunt the gymnasiums in Canton. A little more than a year ago he moved on to Cleveland, where he became a big favorite. He is a fast-moving boxer, but not a deadly hitter. Some time ago, he was badly cut in an automobile accident, which injured his left eye and caused 26 stitches to be taken in his face, but he came back to the ring and gamely fought his way to the top.

JOE M'CARTHY ON SPOT WITH YANKEES

After the 1932 world series, the New York Yankees were sitting on top of the baseball world and it was predicted they would continue to boss the sport for a number of years. Now, however, they have bogged completely down. Their pitching staff has disintegrated, their batting punch has been lost, with the flopping of Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, and their defensive play is ragged, and they are all but out of the running for the pennant, with young Joe Cronin's Washington Senators far out in front.

Naturally, Joe McCarthy, the manager of the club, is coming in for considerable censure. He is on the spot, especially with the Giants in the ascendancy again at the very moment of the Yankees' collapse.

Just how much McCarthy is to be blamed is a matter for argument. On the surface, it would appear that the main trouble with the Yankees is that they have run their course. All great teams fall apart in time, especially when the stars have outlived their usefulness. Now you answer the question of whether a great team makes a great manager or a great manager makes a great team.

STOCK MARKET MOVEMENT NARROW

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Stocks and staples generally displayed a lack of enthusiasm today and prices mulled about rather narrowly in trading that was about on par with yesterday's quiet performance.

While no particular weakness was shown by any of the share groups, there was no especial buying noticeable except in some of the motor equities and a few specialties. The activity was fair in the first half hour, but the ticker tape was not pressed at any time and later moved at a dragging pace. Grains were moderately irregular and cotton about steady. Bonds were dull and a trifle mixed. The dollar was a bit firmer in foreign exchange dealings.

The stock market today, as in the past few weeks, was a highly selective affair, with groups of shares taking divergent courses. Interest in issues of some of the automobile companies apparently was maintained and there was an early large turnover in both General Motors and Chrysler issues.

In line with the activity of the motors, traders were cheered by the statement of J. W. Scoville, chief statistician of Chrysler, to the effect that "a 4,000,000-car year is probably not far distant." Scoville added that "increase in automobile buying is general" with sales coming from all sections of the country.

Commission houses reported that most of the investment buying has been going into stocks which, it is expected, will be the first to reflect the improvement in consumers purchasing power. Some attention is also being paid, it was said, to issues of companies in which labor costs constitute a relatively small portion of operating expenses. The utilities, however, still laboring under further rate-cutting uncertainties, have been inclined to idle.

Just how much the volatile alcohol stocks have discounted the early repeal of prohibition is a matter of much argument in the financial district. Two more states—Texas and Washington—will vote on the wet amendment within the next few days and the anti-prohibition forces seemingly are confident that the sweep they have obtained so far will be unbroken.

GRAINS MOVE NARROWLY

A few selling orders, accumulateed overnight, served to ease prices slightly and operations then halted. Wheat opened ¼-¾ cents lower and then fluctuated narrowly. Corn started steady to ½ cent lower and showed little change.

The market fiddled around most of the morning in an aimless manner, apparently waiting a new incentive or a restoration of confidence in outside buyers.

Wheat was rather easily influenced by light transactions, but bounced back readily on all recessions.

Corn was quiet, despite the fact that the crop was in a critical situation. Oats fluctuated in a range of ½ cent a bushel. Provisions were quiet and a little easier with grains.

Business Failures 50% Under Year Ago

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—(AP.)—Business failures in the United States for the week ended August 17, reports Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., were less than one-half of those in the same period of 1932.

The trade agency's records show 312 defaults, against 349 and 325, respectively, in the two preceding weeks and 648 a year ago. For the year to date, the decline in failures is equivalent to 31.1 per cent.

Western Pacific Loan Plea Denied

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The Western Pacific Railroad's application for a loan of $1,000,000 from the R. F. C. has been disapproved by the I. C. C.

The loan was disapproved, Commissioner Meyer informed Thomas M. Schumacher, chairman of the road's executive committee, because the commission concluded the road could not adequately secure the loan.

'STREET' FACING MOMENTOUS CHANGES

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The next four months promise to be the most momentous in Wall street's history.

Decisions that will affect the whole future course of the Street and its mode of business, as well as the lives of all who come in its shadows, must be made between now and the first of the year.

It will be a turning point that has no precedent, and no one knows just where it will lead. The only thing certain seems to be that the past and its ways are to be buried—at least until another generation or war.

The Wall street show has three main rings—the stock exchange, the investment banking house and the big banks. All the rest are just the usual camp followers, hangers on and sideshow attractions that tag a "big top." If the big show flourishes, they prosper, too. If its business declines or suffers a setback, they feel it, too.

The three big rings have had their ups and downs, but up to now they have been allowed to conduct themselves pretty much as they pleased. The depression and the new deal in Washington have changed all that, and now the business methods of all three are either in the process or about to be thoroughly reorganized.

NEW MARKET RULES

For the big banks, the course has already been charted. There is no decision to be made. It has been rendered for them by the Glass-Steagall bill. They are to get out of the securities business and stick to their "last"—the business of making loans and financing trade expansion.

But for the other two main attractions—the decision as to the future is being left to them for the moment.

The stock exchange has to regulate itself before the next session of Congress or else have the job done for it by the government. Some think it is even too late now to forestall government regulation.

Be that as it may, the stock exchange is weighing a number of drastic reforms, some of which broke into print last week. The stock exchange's job is to curb gambling and return brokers to their role of agents. So far none of its new regulations accomplish either.

BANKS RESTRICTED

The decision the investment banking houses have to make is whether they will become bankers or security sellers. The Glass-Steagall bill prohibits investment bankers from accepting deposits and from sitting on commercial bank boards. These are two of the chief activities of the great house of Morgan, which is among those that must make this choice.

In this connection it should be recalled that J. P. Morgan on the stand in Washington testified security distribution was not the major part of their business.

Whatever these decisions finally are, they will mean a complete revamping of the Wall Street machine and the business of security distribution.

The forced removal of the banks from the security distribution field leaves one big gap, and now if the brokers are forced into the role of agents for buyers and sellers of securities, there will be an even greater one.

Big Drop in Cotton Acreage Predicted

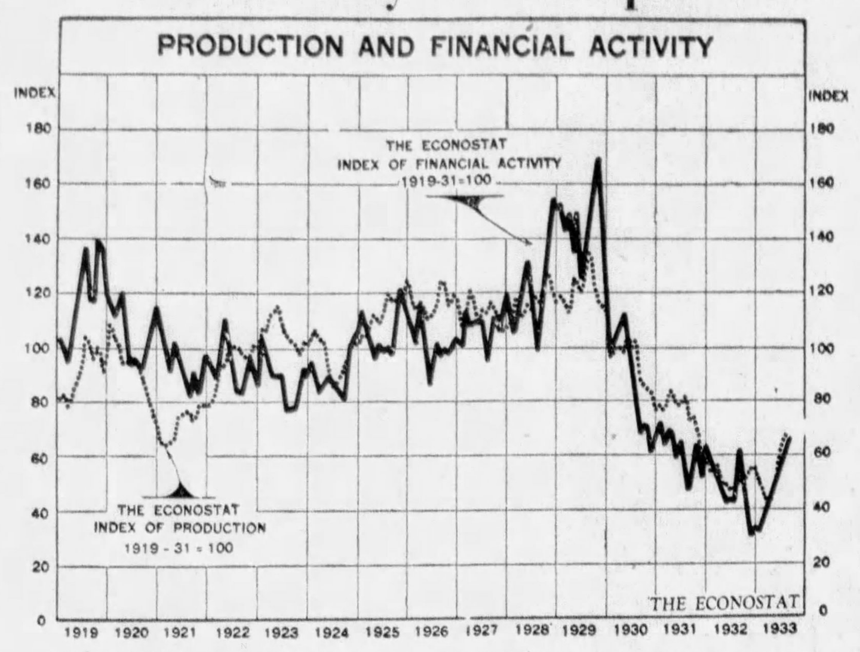
WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP.)—Secretary Wallace said last night that "instead of planting around 40,000,000 acres of the United States to cotton, it seems likely that we shall put in only about 25,000,000 acres next spring."

In an address the Secretary of Agriculture reviewed the programs under way by the Farm Adjustment Administration and said leaders of the South had assured him they would soon have a plan ready so "they will not plant cotton in the unlimited, planless way they have in the past."

Further Increase In Tires Forecast

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The Standard Statistics Company says reports from tire manufacturing centers indicate that another 10 per cent increase in casing and tube quotations is in early prospect. If the revision comes, it will mark the fourth advance since last spring and carry average prices well above those of early 1933, it is said.

Composite Financial Activity Points Way for Output Index



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Editor, The Econostat.

The accompanying chart represents an effort to portray activity in two separate but related economic fields.

The solid line is a composite index based upon seven statistical factors operating in the general field of finance. It includes bond and stock sales, dividend and interest payments, new security issues, money rates, bank debits in New York City and the rate at which bank deposits in New York City circulate. Each one of these series has been expressed in terms of a base equal to the average figure during the period 1919-1931. Having expressed each series in percentages of the base they are then all combined after being weighted according to their relative importance.

In a similar fashion an index of production has been compiled, consisting of 11 series—steel, pig iron, cotton consumption, construction, electric power, automobile, commodity carloadings, crude oil production, bituminous coal, cement and boots and shoes.

It is of interest to note that financial activity is the more sensitive and the more volatile of the two composite series. It fluctuates more rapidly and passes through a far greater range than does production. At times it also anticipates changes, although its record on this score is not uniform. Financial activity may be said to have anticipated the severe decline in business in the early spring and in turn to have preceded the rise which started in April.

During the month of July financial activity rose from 58.0 per cent of normal to 65.7 per cent while the index of production rose from 62.3 to 67.1. It is entirely logical that financial activity should precede the movement of production and that it should be more sensitive. It is much more subject to rumor and to emotional hazards than is production. The highly erratic fluctuations of security prices in themselves are an illustration of the point.

An increase in production is usually preceded by financing operations and this in turn will be reflected in rising bank debits and an increase in the rate of deposit turnover. Also, many of the factors which lead producers to step up their schedules are sensed in advance by the market and result in rising security prices.

Normally, an increase in production is accompanied or preceded by rising money rates and a drop in production by a decline in money rates. For these reasons a composite index of financial activity is of interest, although its barometric value may be questioned.

In Memoriam 1-B

In loving memory of our beloved daughter and sister, Thelma Mae McAfee, who passed away one year ago today, August 22, 1932.
What would we give to clasp her hand,
To hear her voice and see her smile
That meant so much to us.
Sadly missed by her Father, Mother and Brothers.

In fond memory of my husband, First Lieut. W. R. Hischemoller, who was killed in service at Camp Meade, Md., 10 years ago, August 22, 1923.
A silent string in memory's harp

Gripping Story of Life Behind The Scenes at Hollywood

By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

CHAPTER XXXV.

Driving in silence, Slug chauffered him through a succession of sunny and commonplace Hollywood streets until they arrived at the minor business thoroughfare of Western avenue. Finding a convenient space, Slug parked the car.

Across the street was a three-story building, the lower floors occupied by small stores. Midway of the building was an entrance and stairs leading to the cheap apartments of the upper floors.

"It's straight down the hall on the second floor," said Slug. "The last door on the right."

Cavanaugh discarded the sombrero and bandana. Chances of capture, now, were negligible. He was in excellent spirits—elastic and athletic-looking in his gray suit with the dark blue tie.

Two young girls in passing glanced at him with interested eyes, but he ignored them.

"Well, so long, Slug. Thanks a lot for everything."

"Better take me along with you—"

"Shall I wait with the car?"

"How about a rod—want to borrow mine?"

"I've got my own," lied Cavanaugh to save argument.

He was not armed because he had never, at any time, felt the need of a weapon. A rod, actually, was not necessary to an agile man with a cool brain. As a means of defense it was uncertain and its powers of accomplishment were nil.

"In case you don't come out," said Slug, "how about Miss Luneska? Want me to send her some kind of a message—"

"Well, I'll be seein' you."

"Sure you will."

LUCKY THRILLED

Cavanaugh carried an atmosphere of extreme well-being with him across the street and several passersby noticed him with approval. He had the air of a happy young man.

In the entrance he paused and looked negligently at the names of the letter boxes. This was mere idle curiosity. Poletzki's name was not visible—it wouldn't be.

Cavanaugh's mission was not in the least light-hearted, yet he was beginning to feel a physical thrill.

It was like driving a high-powered car over a dangerous mountain road, or staking his last twenty dollars on the wheel, or diving from a high spring-board into a pool.

Cavanaugh opened the glass door and started to go up the thinly-carpeted stairs. His throat was just a little dry. He was climbing on the balls of his feet. The place smelled a trifle stale. The tenants, quite obviously, cooked at home. An inconspicuous and commonplace hideaway for a man in Poletzki's position. Cavanaugh was whistling softly.

Whenever he was gambling for high stakes he always whistled and kept a level head.

LENI WORRIED

A middle-aged woman with a market basket on her arm passed him on the stairs. He stepped aside, smiled, took off his hat. The woman thought him the nicest young man she had seen in a long time and her day brightened.

Thereafter, Cavanaugh did not smile.

He did not know exactly how he would get into Poletzki's apartment. Perhaps the man would not be at home. In that case he would have to commit burglary. To knock on the door and find out would be a simple method. Simple, but superlatively dangerous.

No one could fathom what reaction might be expected from abruptly disturbing a murderous, drug-drenched, abnormal mind . . .

* * *

At the same moment that Lucky Cavenaugh, with every sense alert, was approaching Poletzki's door, Leni Luneska, in her own elaborate home, was conscious of a tightened sensation around her heart.

As soon as one worry was over another took its place. One wave of anxiety after another. Her life had become a mighty storm of these waves.

For a brief truce with fate she and Cavanaugh had glimpsed a golden peace. It had been so beautifully short—that last brief half hour together.

GETS FAN MAIL

The reaction was setting in. It was no good blinking the facts. He might come back to her sound and free, or the next time she saw him he might be . . . dead?

Somebody had shot and killed a woman in his apartment. He had told Mulrooney, in her presence, that the fatal shot had been meant for him. . . .

The startling truth was that she knew little or nothing about Lucky Cavanaugh. Knew even less about the death-dodging complications of his dangerous existence.

She had gone back to her bedroom in a futile effort to recapture something of the happiness that Cavanaugh had taken with him when he left. The print of his head was still upon one of the pillows . . .

"Forgive me, madame."

It was Celeste bearing a small wicker tray crowded with more than a hundred letters. All of them had been opened and read at the studio. These were a few of the most interesting ones out of the daily thousands.

The maid put the fan mail upon a low table beside an easy chair. All of these letters had been answered already by Leni's secretary at the studio. They came from all parts of the world. In times past they had stimulated Leni's ambition. Now they were meaningless bits of paper.

"You take them away, Celeste."

Celeste's face saddened. Her mistress was constantly disappointing her. This slim French girl in her chaste black dress anguished over Leni like a mother hen.

"What has happened, madame?" she begged in a worried voice. "Something it is wrong? It is sickness?"

CALLS STUDIO

Leni turned her face away from the girl. Those intent brown eyes, distressed and sympathetic, were like question marks, eternally demanding answers.

"Please go away," Leni whispered wearily. "I am perfectly well. I don't care what you do, Celeste—only leave me alone."

Celeste took the letters out, her shoulders drooping slightly as she left.

Still in her lounging pajamas with the cloth of gold jacket, Leni flung herself upon the bed. She tried to think, but her problems could not be reached by thought.

Sitting up in bed she reached the telephone book for his number and failed to find it. Then she did a foolish thing.

She laid her face into the hollow that his head had left upon the silken pillow. It was a silly effort and it brought her no satisfaction at all.

It is an old thing about the way the human mind operates under heavy pressure of feeling. It swings like a pendulum from one extreme to another.

In her heart, Lucky Cavanaugh and Herman Gerstenfield were as far apart as east and west.

Leni picked up the telephone and called the studio.

There was a subtle change in the voice of the operator. "I don't think Mr. Gerstenfield will answer his phone, Miss Luneska," said the voice. "He gave orders not to be disturbed."

"No, he's alone."

"Then there's no reason why you shouldn't ring him."

But there was a very good reason and the operator knew it. Gerstenfield had ordered everybody out of his office in a burst of temper that shook the studio walls. The gossip was flying from office to office that he had literally kicked Ned Wingate out of the luxurious private office. Those stories get around rapidly on the lot. Gerstenfield seldom blew up but the rumor, this time, was that he had become a regular volcano.

Leni waited a long time. The operator at the other end left the switch open so she could hear the buzzing in Gernstenfield's office. Then, suddenly, his voice leaped like cracking fire through the wires.

"I want to talk to you—if you can be a little polite," she said half-humorously. "This is Leni!"

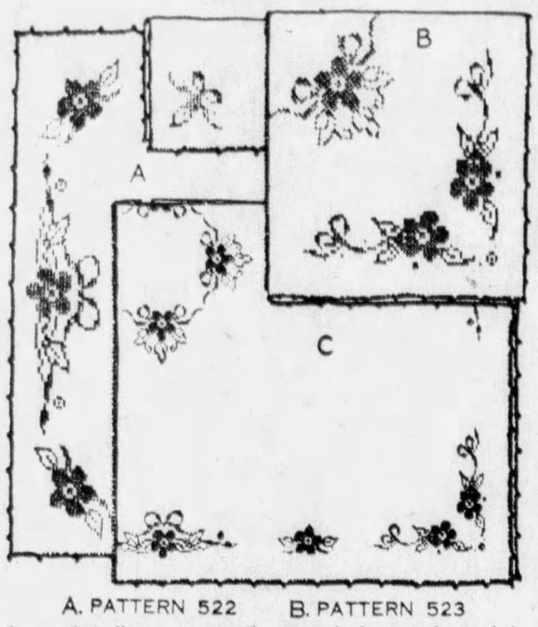
PATCHWORK QUILT PATTERN



A. PATTERN 522 B. PATTERN 523

Cross stitch linens are smart—smart to have and smart to make. Simple to do, the resulting linens have lasting value for they are always in good taste. In this pattern, which is to be done in three colors, the large crosses make the design grow quickly. Embroidering is also simplified by distinct color marking on the pattern itself, which eliminates the need for a color chart. Each of the two patterns shown can be used separately or can be combined to make handsome linens.

A, Pattern 522, includes four motifs 4½x15 inches, four motifs 3x8½ inches and eight 3½x4½-inch napkin motifs.

B, Pattern 523, includes four 11½-inch corner motifs, four 6x8½-inch motifs and four napkin motifs same as those in Pattern 522.

A and B each show one arrangement of the motifs. C shows the two patterns combined to make a handsome tablecloth 60x72 inches. There are many other ways of combining the two patterns. Each pattern includes sketches with yardages for a variety of linens; sketches with yardages for linens to be made of the combined patterns are also given.

Send 10c for each pattern (20c for both) to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

The Junior Patrol Mail Box

Are your friends back from vacation, fellows?

Now is one of the best times for a fellow who wants to be a Captain to organize a Junior Patrol. Only a week or two away now, and school will be starting again. When you're going to school it's easy to meet a lot of other fellows and to make a lot of friends—always remembering, too, fellows, that you should choose your friends with care.

When you form a new club, or take new members into your Patrol, you want to be sure that they are good fellows who will be real friends to all the other members. Most fellows ARE okay, but you want to be careful you don't spoil your club by taking in fellows who are discontented no matter what happens, and who are mean and selfish.

You remember Spike wasn't such a good fellow at first, but he soon straightened out and now he is as swell a fellow as you would ever want to meet. Most fellows are fine, but sometimes they have to learn to help others and to be kind and generous.

We have heard that some new Captains are trying to take more members from other Captains.

That isn't right, but if your members want to join some other patrol, Captains, you shouldn't try to make them stay with you. A loyal member will stay with his own club, and you don't want members around who aren't loyal anyway—if you have a good club in the beginning.

If there are two or three patrols in the same neighborhood, the Captains of all of them should try to co-operate. Each patrol must have 10 members, but if a member in your patrol wants to go and join some other patrol, that is all right. It is his privilege to do that. But no captain should go to a fellow who belongs to another patrol and ask him to change.

We are still having a hard time explaining to some of the fellows and girls who want to be Captains what you have to do to get an armband. Look this list over fellows—paste it in your hat if you are thinking about starting a new patrol—THESE RULES AND REGULATIONS ARE IMPORTANT.

1—You must have at least 10 members WHO HAVE SIGNED PLEDGE SLIPS (OR COPIES OF THE PLEDGE SLIP) AND HAVE RECEIVED THEIR JUNIOR PATROL PINS AND CARDS FROM HEADQUARTERS.

2—You must be elected Captain by a majority of your 10 or more members at a meeting.

3—If you have fellows in your patrol who are already members, when you send in your membership roll of 10 names, instead of pledges, you must write their names, addresses and the numbers of their Junior Patrol cards.

Just today we got a letter from Louis F, Kerekes, of 416 Tenth avenue, Homestead, who wrote a nice letter with a roll of five names, but no numbers, no pledge and not enough names—10 are needed. Naturally, we can't send you an armband, Louis, until you are a real Patrol Captain. See the rules just above.

Catherine Jane Smith, of 601 Stewart avenue, Grove City, sends in 10 pledges and is the Captain of a new club. Congratulations, Jane.

"Our mother wants us all to join your club. We are sending four pledges. We are very glad to join your club."

William Miller, of 2612 Sarah street, writes that he is going to be a 100 per cent Junior Patrol member. How about starting a patrol, Bill?

Edward Fitzgerald, of Pricedale, Pa., writes that he wants to be a captain. Remember, Edward, you must be elected Captain by 10 members of a club—all of them registered here at headquarters.

Above picture shows improved type of combination bottlecapper, time clock and addressing machine which Mr. Frisby purposes to use in his gigantic ocean-to-ocean enterprise.

WASHINGTON—Congressman Horace Frisby has offered his wife a property settlement if she will drop her demand for alimony.

"My plan," explained Mr. Frisby, "is to give Mrs. Frisby five shares of stock in the proposed Frisby Brewing Company. The other 245,000 shares will be sold to the public at $5 a share. The well-known chemists, Stoppe, Luke & Lissen, estimate that there is ample water in Lake Michigan and the Mississippi River for my enterprise. I propose to obtain options on all property bordering on these bodies of water, and in addition will drill a well. It is estimated that by placing our storage tanks on top of the Great Divide a substantial saving will be effected by gravity flow distribution. Pipe lines will be constructed to nine of the eleven Western States. It is a well-known fact that there are 11,342,000 families with faucets in their kitchens which can be quickly connected with our nationwide hookup by using an ordinary monkey wrench. Our survey shows that each person consumes an average of less than 1,687,000 barrels of beer annually. It is upon this market that we will concentrate. No one is allowed to make any statement in connection with this stock offering that is not contained in the above broadside."

At times, it's hard to keep from sympathizing with Wall street. When stocks are going up, it's always conditions that are responsible. But when they go down, it's always dose guys.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

No hope for growth after the age of 17 or so. So let the pint-size girl stop her worrying, it won't do a bit of good. By keeping the backbone stretched to its fullest extent, she will feel taller, look taller. Short girls, still in the growing period, should get nine hours sleep every night, stick to a balanced diet, exercise out of doors every day. The rompers and the tomboys are likely to grow taller than the little house plants.

One application of glycerine will put dry lips in beauty form again. When bathing the face, go over the lips gently with soap and water, dry, apply glycerine. There will be a satiny finish on which lip rouge will impart an even color, no splotches or seamy places. No matter how nerves jangle, don't succumb to lip biting. Very bad habit, ruins the coating which should bear no shaggy bits of cuticle.

The ideal foot has a medium arch. That's the kind that puts up the most graceful appearance, gives best service when there's a date for the long walk, the game of tennis or golf. The lazy woman who hates exercise, never walks a block if she can leap into the gasoline chariot, is the one who develops high arches. To keep feet healthy and happy the heel of the shoe should not lift them more than one inch and a quarter. Of course, the evening indulgence in higher heels is permitted.

Typists who spend the day at the machine must do their daily dozen and walk at least 10 blocks to insure against hip spread and a bulge below the waistline. By sitting erect, holding the chest up, placing as much of the thighs on the chair seat as there is room for, there will be less chance of accumulating width of torso. Chair deformities, the gym folk call them.

No Scotland Yard For America

The introduction of a Scotland Yard to America would certainly tone up our crime wave.

Scotland Yard always gets its man except when it's a woman. Then it brings them both in to pay for their mistakes. Which may have been overbidding a bridge hand or criticizing the taxicab service.

England has no crime for almost the same reason that few motor cars are stolen in Florida. England is an island and there's no getaway. Down in Florida it is a tough job to run a stolen car through the neck of the bottle.

We don't require European detectives to help us catch our tough boys. It's easy to catch them. That's when the trouble starts. We need help after the nab. Every arrest in this land is an elimination tournament.

And they come along. Do that in America and the next thing

We saw an arrest in Paris that was tops in Gandhi's system of passive resistance. The gendarme walked alongside his prisoner with the rest of us trailing 10 feet to the rear. The mugg had robbed a shop during the sacred siesta hours of noon to three. The gendarme had his own hands in back of him while the prisoner waved his arms in the throes of animated speech.

There wasn't a thing to prevent the culprit from a lammister. But he evidently figured it was below his dignity. We trailed them to the calaboose waiting for the break that never came. That's all they need over there. A finger on the sleeve. Over here, we require the eight arms of a full grown octopus reinforced by an elephant's trunk and a yard of garden hose.

Scotland Yard wouldn't do so good with that "come along sir" over here. Our boys recognize authority only after they have struggled and finished at the bottom of the heap.

William A. Magee's Plan to Appeal Only to the Reason Of the Voters Is Commendable

These are busy days for the candidates for public office. Some who are to come before the voters in the primary election are attending as many as a dozen meetings a day. They feel it is their duty to be present at every corn-roast, picnic, big family reunion, political, civic, fraternal, religious, business and social gathering to which they can obtain an invitation.

They make speeches on any and every occasion; they shake hands with all comers, and have a smile and friendly word for each; they make a reputation for themselves as good fellows.

This method of electioneering is effective, but it places too high a premium on geniality. Not infrequently some of these genial politicians whom the public puts in office turn out to be rascals or numbskulls, and the public would have been better off if it had elected instead candidates who, while not so affable, possessed in greater measure the qualities that make for really good public service.

We welcome, accordingly, the announcement that ex-Mayor William A. Magee, a candidate for City Council, will conduct his campaign almost exclusively through radio addresses. His is to be a more or less impersonal appeal to the reason and good judgment of the citizens.

The plan will enable Magee to keep, without embarrassment, his pledge to remain free of factional and partisan tie-ups. By not appearing on the platform with the candidates of any particular clique he will avoid even the semblance of an entangling alliance.

The experiment will be interesting as a test of the effectiveness of the radio as an instrumentality for reaching the voters. We know of no other campaign in which an aspirant for office placed his chief reliance on this agency for appealing to the citizens.

It will also be interesting as a test of the ability of an independent candidate to make a good showing at the polls without resorting to promiscuous and unstinted handshaking.

'Traffic Clinic' Results

The Hill District Inquiry Leads to the Correction of Conditions Blamed for Accidents.

The "traffic clinics" that are being conducted in various parts of the city under the direction of the Better Traffic Committee and the Bureau of Traffic Planning are disclosing some conditions that have an important bearing on the accident problem and thus are paving the way for remedial measures.

A report just issued by Lewis W. McIntyre, city traffic engineer, on the results of the "clinic" in the Hill district, the first held, gives some interesting information. McIntyre finds that PEDESTRIANS WHO CROSS IN THE MIDDLE OF THE BLOCK HAVE BEEN RESPONSIBLE FOR MOST OF THE 67 ACCIDENTS to pedestrians that have occurred in the Third and Fifth wards during the last five years.

If people will disregard the traffic rules and not even heed the common sense directions that ordinary prudence suggests, there seems little that can be done to save them from mishaps.

But it is pleasant to note that the investigators of the Hill district accidents decided that there were a number of things that might be done there to protect the people. Admonitory signs are to be erected and pedestrians' crosswalks established at 30 points, mostly on Center, Wylie, Bedford and Herron avenues, and safety islands, flashing beacons or other safety devices constructed at six other points.

Thus, the first "traffic clinic" is producing action promptly. The corrective measures should reduce accidents on "the Hill" and help to maintain Pittsburgh's prestige as the winner of the National Safety Council's contest as "the safest city" in 1932.

An Election Threat

Dishonesty Will Be Facilitated If Voting Machines Are Again Barred From Service

After years of delay, and litigation, and repair of mechanical defects, Allegheny County's voting machines are declared to be ready for service in the primary election in Pittsburgh next month.

But another condition has risen which may bar them from the polls and again require the use of paper ballots. E. J. Wuerthele is a candidate for a councilmanic nomination of five parties—Republican, Democratic, Independent, Square Deal and Liberal. Maj. William T. Rees, director of the Bureau of Elections, states that the voting machines are not large enough to take care of this situation, but that if Wuerthele will withdraw from two of the tickets the machines can be used.

It is very desirable that the machines shall be used, because there is a threat of dishonesty at the polls and we know by bitter experience how easily fraud can be perpetrated with paper ballots.

The discovery that some of the names and addresses on the tax assessment lists are fictitious evidences a determination to cheat. But cheating will not be so easy if voting machines are used.

Pocket Radios

For Police.

British police, it was reported some time ago, were experimenting with a pocket radio as an aid to crime detection. From Brighton, England's famous bathing resort, comes news of the device in actual practice.

The set, as described by the authorities, weighs 1 pound, 12 ounces, and fits easily in to the breast pocket of a policeman's coat. The "aerial" is built into the back of the coat.

The sets have an effective range of ten miles in a city and forty miles in the country.

Police radio cars are in use in leading American cities, and have proved of the highest value in running down criminals. Pocket sets, however, have not been adopted here.

They are worth trying. If successful, they would multiply the effectiveness of the individual officer many times.

By HELEN ROWLAND

Modern Tailor-Maids

Life is becoming as dizzy and bewildering as a Virginia reel.

* * *

You never know, when you open your evening newspaper, what new shock or surprise you will find in the next few pages. Or on which side of a question either of the sexes has taken a brand new stand, overnight.

* * *

One evening we learn to our amazement that the men are going back to the Gay Nineties for their fall styles. And that Marlene Dietrich, the leader of the trousers-for-women crusade, has doffed her pants and is going in headlong for frills and petticoats and feathered hats.

* * *

It will be rather quaint and intriguing to see our modern hemen all dolled up in ascot ties, Piccadilly collars, gay-colored waistcoats, gold watch chains, spats and boutonnieres. And will they wear red under flannels and carry canes and go in for charming manners to match?

* * *

Clothes DO affect one's manners, somehow. No girl can be the same wild, daring Amazon or giddy jazz-baby in a long, trailing, ruffled skirt that she was in a pair of slacks or a flapper-frock. There is something about those skirts which impels her to modesty and femininity and even inspires her to coquetry.

* * *

And, we doubt that a man wearing spats and a tail-coat and pearl gray gloves and a boutonniere could have the heart to make himself look silly by putting on a paper cap and playing clown with a rattler and a penny-whistle. Or by mauling a lady and kissing her on the ear, on the way home in a taxicab.

So far as I am concerned, Marlene can doff her pants without bringing a tear to my eyes! I rejoice that the trouser-fad never really "took." Next to a tight shoe or a steel corset, the most uncomfortable garment ever invented by man is PANTS!

* * *

I've tried every variety of pajama, from the wide, frilly, skirty kind to linen slacks and the strictly tailored sort. But, it's like choosing among summer hotels; they're stuffy and hot and uncomfortable, and you thank heaven when you get OUT of them and back into a cool, comfy house dress.

* * *

Still, I trust that the trouser mania has done its bit, by bringing back the smart tailored styles, which struck the Town, last spring. Somehow, a woman never looks quite so well-groomed and perfectly gotten up in anything else, as she does in a smart, well-tailored suit. Or quite so modish and thoroughbred.

* * *

If Marlene Dietrich's little excursion into the masculine realm has brought back the feminine tailored suit to STAY, we modern women who pride ourselves on our "intelligence," and all that sort of thing, may have a little leisure and a little gray-matter to spend on something besides matching feathers and ribbons and stockings—and still keep our reputation as "the best-dressed women in the world."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The most striking figure among artists continues to be the black and white master, Charles Dana Gibson. Wherever he appears in public heads turn, even among those who are unconscious of his identity. I am told he is even better known in London.

Over there people follow in the manner of the small boy trailing a ring champion. Of enormous but well proportioned bulk, he has a patrician profile and heavy brow magnificent with the majesty of Michaelangelo. His walk is a stride without self-consciousness of celebrity.

His wife is one of the famous Langhorne beauties of Virginia, and as he is seldom seen without her, her matured stateliness adds panache to the mass attraction. Few successful artists have displayed such keen interest in the embryo artist struggling up. He has been a father confessor.

Like E. Berry Wall, Gibson clings to the extravangantly wide wing collar. While he contributes a pen sketch now and then to "Life," which he owns, he has little enthusiasm for the Gibson girl and tip-toeing Mr. Pipp which made him famous. His metier is now a broader palette with oils.

* * *

Psychology—In the swankiest jewelry establishment in town an article is never called cheap. It is low priced.

* * *

Theatrical press agents have thinned to a handful. Most of the energetic guild have turned to other callings until there is a revival of the theater. And such a revival grows increasingly debatable. In the days when Joe Drum, Leon Friedman, Wells Hawks, Nellie Revell and Walter Kingsley headlighted the scene, there were more than 100 p. a's drawing salaries from $75 to $400 a week.

* * *

The most accomplished in the art of extravagant three sheeting—certainly the most highly paid—was the late and nervously energetic Harry Reichenbach. His income at one time was in excess of $2,000 a week. He was the instigator of "plants" which often flowered on page one and caused city editors to wring their hands.

* * *

The most hilarious left-over in the theatrical field is the effervescing Dick Maney, a jovial and derbied wight with a black cigar, and much barrack-room ribaldry. He was dramatized as the boisterous ballyhooer in "20th Century," a dramatization transferred to the film version. The latest yarn concerns his casual dropping in at a cafe on the lower East Side. As a gesture of pleasantry he gave three cheers for Hitler. It was the wrong spot for such exuberance and he found himself buried in chairs, dishes and sundry nicknacks. Lifting his head from the debris, he chirped: "Custer in the Ghetto!"

* * *

It was Maney on guard at the suite of one of his theatrical stars, who received four newspapermen for an interview. Picking up the phone, he relayed to his principal: "Three reporters and a gentleman from the Boston Transcript."

* * *

I dropped in at one of the last of the decaying brick homes on Park avenue yesterday to see a writer of books, who has just taken it over. The hall was large and echoey. From his study we went into a small flagged court. Wind rustled ivy on the brick wall and a canary indulged vague chirping as we approached. A rheumatic old fellow in blue shirt with hat abaft was cutting spikes of weeds here and there with a hand scythe. No telephone in the house and the old-fashioned lid-up and drippy ice chest on the back porch. I had a feeling, a very comfortable feeling, this was what Park avenue and most of New York were like before grandeur went to their heads.

The venerable Robert Bridges, 75-year-old editor of Scribner's, is one of the most ardent film fans in town. Almost every night, he may be seen puttering in and out of a movie, Taj Mahals, beard, tailcoat, silver headed cane and all. He is said to be especially interested in dashing crook films.

I was telling Paul Whiteman today of my desire for new bookcases in modern decor could I afford them. "Why not," inquired Howard Acton across the room, "take it out of your next year's yearnings!"

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Love is not a continuous experience.

You cannot always feel warmly even toward those you profess to love best—your nearest and dearest. Inevitably, there come times when your heart seems empty and apart. A strange indifference sweeps over you. You are no longer enthusiastic, nor sympathetic . . . nor even tender. Indeed, you seem incapable of any feeling save a vague hostility which is apt to flame into active resentment if others press too close.

An hour ago, this familiar face seemed as near and dear as your own flesh. Now it seems as alien as any stranger's! And you see faults which yesterday you did not notice. Tiresome little mannerisms . . . irritating stupidity and clumsiness—

Suddenly you're frightened. What has happened? Your heart feels frozen . . . finished. Is love really over? Has the glamour gone, forever? You're sure it has. You couldn't possibly feel this way if a spark of love were left. Nor could any love survive having seen them like this—as disagreeable strangers.

Yes, you are sure that love is over! And a dreadful loneliness falls upon you. Life no longer seems worth while. For now you will have to go on alone—always alone. There will be no one to understand you—no one to care what happens to you. For you, yourself, no longer care. You are as cold to everyone as everyone is to you. How terrible it all is! You hate love—such a fleeting dream. You hate life—such a purposeless struggle. You wish that you had never been born—

So, for a space, you walk alone—bitter and hopeless. Then suddenly, without reason or warning, love comes flooding back! You see your dear ones through the old sweet glamour. You long to serve them. You no longer notice or resent their foolish faults. You love each other—that is enough! Your heart is warm again and all the world is bright.

But why is this? How can this be? Can we really love—yet know such periods of indifference and disgust . . . or even spite? The answer's simple—

Love isn't a natural habit for any animal. Mating, with its periodical enthusiasm, is a natural habit, but the love which carries on "for better or worse," through family life and friendship is not natural. It is an acquired habit—part of our civilized program which we still perform poorly and irregularly.

We know how to do nearly everything better than we know how to love. We know how to fear and hate, how to work and play and fight far better than we know how to love, because we have done these things ever since life first started. But we have loved for a comparatively short time—it is our newest, most difficult lesson.

So love isn't a continuous performance for any of us. We are able to love for a longer or shorter period, according to our natures. But sooner or later we all slump into the old, animal selfishness and indifference.

These slumps would be perfectly harmless if we knew what was happening. But we don't. No one has ever told the truth about love. No one has ever told us what to expect of love . . . how much or how little we are able to love . . . how much of a strain human love can, as yet, stand. To the contrary, we have been told a number of delightful but perfectly idiotic fairy tales. We have been told that True Love Never Dies . . . that Two Hearts Will Always Beat As One, if they really love each other . . . that "Nothing Can Quench the Fires of Love." So, naturally, at the first quenching, we decide that love is over—or never really happened. And forthwith we proceed to say or do things to each other which may mar our lives forever.

Then what should we do when love goes into a slump? We should do what we do when our interest cools in any other department of our civilized lives. What do we do when we grow sick of our jobs . . . long to turn tramp again? WE CARRY ON. We keep up a good front. We go through the gestures, even though we feel no interest in them. Presently our interest will revive and our work will once more be interesting.

We should do exactly the same with love. Love, like all other civilized arrangements, is bound to prove a dull and irksome business every so often. But that's no proof that it is a failure—it is only a proof that we're not yet grown-up. So when that time comes for you—don't be surprised and horrified. Don't decide that you, or the other fellow, aren't fit for love. Be glad and proud, rather, that you're able to love at all, even for short periods. So CARRY ON! Keep up a good front. Go through the gestures, whether you're interested or not. Presently, your heart will click into action again—once more the world will be bright!

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

Certitude

Though seven years in woe I went,
In lack of gladness or content,
No peace, but only longing's fangs
As fierce as pain's most cruel pangs,
I still would keep my certitude
Of the infinity of good!

Though seven years and seven more
Oppressed, yet still my being's core
Would hold this truth: that, near or far,
Love shines upon me like a star,
For some clear voice within my breast
Keeps whispering of peace and rest!

From whence it comes I do not know,
This sense that loss and grief must go,
That clouds of care must be blown on,
Though now its mists obscure the sun;
But some far voice has promised me

The Human Side of the News

Soldiers of Fortune Flock to South America to Fight for Paraguay—Wendell Case Recalls Tichborne Imposture

By EDWIN C. HILL

SOLDIERS of fortune—White Russians impoverished and alienated by the Bolsheviki, English younger sons and American adventurers are fighting for plucky little Paraguay against Bolivia in that savage war down in South America. Lean Yanks who really haven't been happy since the Great War are taking ship, eager to hop into any scrap that isn't strictly private.

The two South American republics are fighting over a stretch of wild land called El Gran Chaco. There is no region on God's footstool more mysterious, less mapped. It consists of a tropical jungle as big as New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania combined. It is almost in the center of South America. An awesome place, this Chaco, with ferocious, demon-worshipping Indians in its jungles and the savage piranha in its waters. The piranha is an 18-inch fish with razors for teeth, and the most savage scrap of life that walks, swims, crawls or flies.

Stranger than the piranha and the demon-worshippers, even, are the dog-snake and the alligator-cat which, so the Indians vow, are in the jungle and which the white man has yet to disprove. Fifty years of dispute over El Gran Chaco led to the war which has been raging more than a year and which has cost probably 20,000 lives.

* * *

Patino, Tin King Of the World

IN the background of the conflict looms a figure of world celebrity. It is the figure of Senor Simon Patino, who donated 15 airplanes to the army of his native Bolivia. Indeed, the story of El Gran Chaco is no stranger than the story of Simon Patino. The turn of the century found him a small shopkeeper in Bolivia. Today you and I, and almost everybody else in the world, contribute a mite to his great fortune, for he is the world's tin king, the world's greatest producer of tin; owner of banks, oil lands and ranches, with a palace in Paris which is the despair of artists and the amazement of hoi polloi.

Other palaces, scattered about the earth, are held ready for Senor Simon's occupancy. All this he has because he risked all. He put everything he owned—his country store, his own savings and his wife's money, into an expedition to go into the Bolivian mountains and prospect for tin. And he found it—huge, incalculably rich stores of tin. Then he had to capture and corral the beasts of burden to bring his tin to civilization—llamas, the pack animals of the Andes.

And now he is rated as a billionaire, richer than Ford or Rockefeller. So little Paraguay, with her million and a quarter of population, finds herself up against Bolivia, with 3,000,000 people, and also combatting the enormous wealth of the Tin King of the world.

Wendell Fortune Is Divided

FOUR fortunate human beings divide, by Surrogate's decree, the lion's share of the wealth of the departed Wendells of New York, eccentrics who piled up a vast fortune over the course of a century's increase in the real estate value of the metropolis. That strange impostor, Thomas Patrick Morris, whose story—the true one—probably has never been revealed—failed in his bold and stubborn effort to prove himself a legitimate son of John G. Wendell, last of the male Wendells. Not in 65 years have the courts had to deal with such an amazing example of imposture.

Not since the famous Tichborne case, whose romantic and exciting episodes made rich reading for our grandfathers and grandmothers. The Tichborne case stands as the classic example of ingenious scheming to win riches by stealing the shoes of a dead man.

Roger Charles Tichborne was the tenth baronet of his line, of a very ancient family of Hampshire, England. His mother a Frenchwoman, hated England and brought her son up in France. He became more of a Frenchman in speech and personality than an Englishman, but he returned to his native land and went into the army. After an unhappy experience in the service, he quit the colors and sailed for South America. His ship was lost at sea in 1854, all on board perishing. His insurance was paid over and his will proved. His title and estates passed to a younger brother.

Everyone except his mother, old Lady Tichborne, was convinced that he was dead. But she stubbornly refused to accept the fact and welcomed to her home at Tichborne Park every tramp and wastrel that turned up. It became an obsession with the strange, lonely old woman that some day her son would return, perhaps out of his mind.

* * *

Accepts Impostor As Her Lost Son

AND then, one day in 1865, she learned that a butcher in Queensland, Australia, answered to the published description of Sir Roger Tichborne. She wrote to him and he replied. The letter was plainly from the mind and hand of an illiterate person, but so fixed was the obsession of Lady Tichborne that she sent money for the butcher to come to England. He arrived with a group of hangers-on who had invested money in his chances and who, indeed, had cooked up the whole bold scheme of impersonation. Lady Tichborne met the Australian butcher in Paris and promptly accepted him as her lost son in spite of the fact that he could speak not a word of French and bore only the vaguest resemblance to the man he claimed to be.

The half-mad old lady gave the pretender an income of a thousand pounds a year and accepted his wife, an illiterate girl he had married in Queensland. She turned over to the impostors all of her son's diaries and papers—the whole record of his life, and it was this act of hers which led to years of bitter litigation. From the diaries and letters the pretender mastered his part and mastered it so cunningly that he completely fooled thousands.

Finally the case went to court and was fought out for years until, in 1871, it was proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that the claimant was a fraud. He was tried for perjury and, like Patrick Morris, sent to prison for a term of years, but not before various trials had cost a million dollars, nearly half a million of which had to be paid by the Tichborne family. Even then thousands of Englishmen regarded the man as a persecuted martyr. An almost incredible instance of human credulity.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Your business place should be devoid of nonsense and horse play but it need not take on the clammy atmosphere of a morgue.

There are too many places where people must talk in undertones.

Employees under a strain give a visitor the impression that he should hurry through what business he has and get out.

If you want customers—and what business can exist without them—you must give friendly, courteous treatment.

When a customer is met by a tenseness in every word and action among those with whom he plans to spend his money, he won't go back any oftener than is absolutely necessary.

There is that perfunctory "thank you", utterly failing to prove there is any sincerity back of it.

People don't like to trade where they are waited upon by a lot of machines or people who act like machines.

When they have business to transact, it means money to the owner of the place and the spender is entitled to courteous treatment, certainly.

How do you and your clerks greet customers?

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Isn't It So?
